French, British Face Drive on Flank; War Cargo Ban Put in Neutrality Bill

Senate Group Will Receive 7-Point Peace Plan Monday

Penalties on 'Cash And Carry' Features Are Stiffened in Preliminary Draft

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A tentative neutrality bill embracing the President's six anti-war points and adding a seventh last night was being whipped into shape by Administration leaders for submission to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Monday morning.

The seventh point places a specific ban on American vessels carrying any passengers or materials directly or indirectly to a warring nation. Penalties will be stiffened on violations of "cash-and-carry" features of the preliminary draft, Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also disclosed last night.

Preparation of the new "working base" for the Administration's neutrality program followed a round of White House conferences with individual Senators and a meeting of Administration Democrats of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Pittman will apply finishing touches to the measure over the week-end, and it will be offered next week as a substitute for all after the enacting clause of the House-approved Bloom bill.

Isolationists Entrench

Other developments, as a Senate isolationist minority entrenched to oppose the President's request for quick approval of his program:

Twenty members of the Senate Democratic steering and policy committees resolved in a joint meeting "that legislation of the extraordinary session of the Congress should be limited to the purposes for which the President convened it."

The first formal meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee slated for today was postponed until Monday to insure a full attendance and to allow time for preparation of the Administration's preliminary bill draft.

The 24-man Senate isolationist bloc held its third conference in the office of Senator Borah, (Republican), of Idaho, and discussed possible formation of a National "educational" committee of private citizens to campaign against embargo repeal.

Votes Appear Assured

Sufficient votes to report a "cash and carry" neutrality bill to the Senate floor were assured, when at least four members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who last session voted to postpone action, reportedly agreed to vote a report, reserving the right to support amendments in the Senate.

Isolationist Senators claimed a present maximum Senate strength of 39 votes against arms embargo repeal, an estimate that was promptly challenged by an Administration Senate spokesman, who placed opposition strength as of yesterday at only 30 Senators.

In contrast to Congressional opposition claims that heavy mail deliveries are running overwhelmingly against repeal of the arms em-

Justice Butler 'Very Ill,' Back in Hospital

JUSTICE BUTLER.

Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the Supreme Court, was "a very ill man," physicians said last night. He is 73.

Justice Butler, returned to Garfield Hospital after a three-week respite from treatment for a kidney ailment, "had an uncomfortable day," doctors added. Previously, his physician, Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, said he "had a very comfortable night but has shown no improvement."

He became ill about six weeks ago and was released from the hospital after three weeks. He went to his summer home at Woodbine, Md., for rest.

Appointed to the Supreme Court in 1922, when 56, by President Harding, Butler had been one of the outstanding corporation lawyers of the orthwest. Though most of his clients were railroads, he handled matters for many others of prominence and his skill was used by the United Staes and Canadian governments.

Italy Wants Peace Before Balkans Flame

If War Continues Vital Interests Are Likely To Be Involved Soon

Copyright, 1939, by the New York Times.

Rome, Sept. 22.—Events moved badly for Italy in central Europe today and there is a new and even more vigorous press campaign about the "absurdity and criminality" of continuing the war. The "criminals" are the English and French.

If the war conunues a little longer on present lines, vital Italian interests are going to be involved. Quite aside from the apparently sincere belief that the war has ceased to have a raison d'etre and an humanitarian motive for stopping it, this country has some great material reasons for seeing it end now before the Balkans get involved.

The news today is singularly disturbing to Italians. If the final demarcation of the Russo-German division of Poland does not provide for a Polish state based on ethnic frontiers, it will mean Italian suggestions are being ignored and one of the prime reasons given here for accepting defeat of Poland is being destroyed by Germany and Russia.

There are fears for Rumania which, in taking drastic action against the Iron Guards, has challenged Germany. Since Germany cannot get at Rumania directly it is being asked if Hungary will have to give in now to the demands made to Foreign Minister Czacky at Berchtesgaden in August? Thus the whole question of peace in the Balkans is becoming acute.

It cannot be stated whether the government is following the same "peace" line as the newspapers but the press campaign is certainly government-inspired and, therefore, has considerable importance whatever the motives may be. Yesterday's arguments about "uselessness and senselessness" of the war are re-

Friend of U. S. Heads Tokyo's Foreign Office

Adm. Nomura Served Here When Roosevelt Was Second in Navy

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Saturday), Sept. 23.—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, retired, today was named foreign minister in the cabinet headed by Premier Gen. Nobuyuki Abe.

Nomura, who was naval attache in Washington when Franklin D. Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, probably will assume office Monday.

He will concentrate on an effort to improve Japanese-American relations.

Admiral Nomura, 61, a big, genial sailor, has been president of the Peers School since his retirement from active duty. He lost an eye when Korean nationalists bombed a Japanese victory celebration in Shanghai following the "Shanghai War" of 1932.

His appointment, it was believed, means that Premier Abe will start a strong campaign to obtain a new basic treaty with the United States to supplant the present commercial treaty which has been denounced by President Roosevelt and which expires in January.

Americans See U-Boat Sinking

Hoboken, N. J., Sept. 22 (AP).—Americans arriving on the American cargo liner Steel Mariner today told of a death fight between a British destroyer and a German submarine just off the British coast, which ended, they said, in the U-boat's being sunk with the loss of its crew.

Capt. Frederick Pickering, the freighter's master, said the submarine, unable to submerge, was disguised as a fishing boat.

"The fight lasted for ten minutes. The destroyer sank the U-boat. And that was that," the captain said.

Thousands of Innocents Slain In Warsaw Siege, Mayor Says

Editor's note: "Tens of thousands" of persons have been killed in the German attack on Warsaw, Mayor Stefan Starzynski, hero of the defense of the Polish capital, asserts in the following dispatch, sent in reply to a radiogram from the United Press asking about conditions in the city.

By Mayor Stefan Starzynski,
Civil Commissioner for the Defense of Warsaw.

Warsaw, Sept. 22.—I wish to convey to you my thanks for the messages of good cheer I have received from America and I am sincerely glad to be able to convey to the American public a message picturing briefly the present situation of Warsaw.

I feel it an honor to be the mayor and the civil commissioner for the defense of our capital in this hour of her supreme trial.

The military position of the capital's defense, of course, is in the hands of the military staff, but I can state that our troops up to this hour are maintaining their positions and gradually advancing.

The morale of our troops continues excellent.

I should like to comment on the methods of the Germans attacking Warsaw and I wish to reiterate my former statements in which I labeled these methods as a disgrace to modern civilization.

They consist in the wanton and, from the military viewpoint, the useless slaughter of our civilian population.

They consist in the intentional destruction of our historical buildings, our monuments, our churches, our hospitals, the homes of our work-

Guard Peace, Hull Tells Americas

Ready for Any Threat, Fair Group Told; Panama Host Today To New World Parley

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 22.—Secretary of State Hull declared today that each of the 21 American republics was "ready to defend itself against any threat to its security that may come from any part of the world."

"At the same time," he added, "it is the unalterable desire of each and every one of our nations to remain at peace ourselves and to exercise all influence in our power toward the end that just and enduring peace may become firmly established everywhere."

Meet In Panama

Hull referred to previous inter-American conferences as having "played a great role" in the development of "faith and trust among the American nations," and continued:

"At this very moment representatives of all of the American governments are assembling in Panama for the purpose of taking the measures necessary to safeguard the peace of the Americas. Here we see the functioning of an international system of co-operative peace, designed to assure internal concord and external security for the nations of our hemisphere."

During the Fair program, sponsored by the Pan American Union, of whose governing board Hull is chairman, the Secretary of State was awarded a gold medal by the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission for his "work in fostering peace" between this country and Latin America.

"Based on Justice"

Thomas J. Watson, commission chairman, made the presentation in the presence of ranking diplomatic envoys of the Latin-American countries, the members of the Union's governing board and city and fair officials.

"From the very beginning of their independent existence," Hull said, "the American republics have sought to shape their international policies in accordance with certain cardinal principles. Crucial among these are, first, recognition that each nation is a juridically equal member of the family of nations; and second, recognition that civilization and progress are possible only where there is universal acceptance of order, implemented by international law, and based upon justice, fair dealing, mutual respect, cooperation and the sancity of agreements, freely made, faithfully observed, and honorably altered by peaceful methods when need arises."

Links Peace and Stability

"Under modern conditions," he said at another point, "peace and stability are indivisible in the sense that a major breakdown of one or the other in any important position of the globe inevitably affects the life of the entire world. . . . The tragic hostilities in Europe—the greatest calamity of all—have been in operation but three short weeks, and already their fateful effects have laid a heavy hand upon many phases of the lives of our nations. . . .

"Now that a major war in Europe is a grim reality, there is greater necessity than ever before for all nations still in a position to do so, to increase their exertions for the preservation of those fundamental principles of civilized international relations, through the application of which, alone, we of the Americas are firmly convinced, the progress of the human race can be maintained."

Because of "the disastrous deterioration of international morality," Hull said, the Western Hemisphere nations must co-operate to insulate the Americas from war and its shocks.

He continued:

"It is our devout hope that the conflict now raging in Europe will not extinguish upon that continent the light of that resplendent civilization with which it has, in modern times, illumined the world. It is our fervent prayer that all nations may find themselves sufficient

2,000 Iron Guards Are Reported Executed in Rumanian Purge

Fascists Slain In All Districts For Murder Of Calinescu

By Lloyd Lehrbas,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Sept. 22.—Rumania's purge of known members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guards as vengeance for Premier Armand Calinescu's assassination was declared by informed sources tonight to total "nearly 2,000" executions.

It was officially announced that 292 Guardists—on whose organization Calinescu had waged unceasing war—paid the supreme penalty for membership in the outlawed terrorist band.

The new government, headed by three generals, made full use of King Carol's dictatorial powers to stamp out what had been feared was a widespread revolt.

44 Slain in One Camp

The military regime reported 44 Guardists were executed at Merkurea-Ciuk concentration camp, 32 at Prahova and at least three in each of Rumania's 72 administrative districts.

However, the number executed at 10 other concentration camps was undisclosed, although it was known hundreds of convicted Guardists, many with suspended death sentences, have been confined there.

Calinescu, always friendly to Great Britain and France, was shot to death by a masked band as he rode in his automobile on a main Bucharest street yesterday. The scene was only a five-minute walk from Controceni Castle, where King Carol is living.

Purge Is Country-Wide

The premier's body was taken to the Atheneum, one of the city's most imposing buildings, and placed, flag-draped, in an open coffin on a dais where it will rest in state until the funeral Sunday. A guard of honor of the King's regiment stood watch.

The purge began in all parts of the country a few hours after seven men accused of being the actual killers were executed here with their own revolvers. Women were declared to have been among those shot.

"Quick justice" has been one of King Carol's unwavering policies. It was meted out dramatically last November 30 when Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard "Hitler," and 14 of his chief aides were slain by police while "attempting to escape."

"All Is Quiet and Order"

In place of public panic following a blurted statement on the radio by an Iron Guardist that Calinescu had been assassinated, a communique said "All is quiet and order in Rumania."

There was stark contrast between the military honor paid Calinescu's body and the treatment accorded the assassins' bodies, which lay for more than 24 hours where they were executed—on the same spot where the premier was slain.

The blood-spattered bodies sprawled awkwardly where they fell after the executioners—one to each man—fired bullets behind their ears. Bodies of two other assassins said to have committed suicide when police surrounded their refuge, were dumped on the avenue with them.

A Warning Banner

Nearby was a banner reading: "Such will be the fate of all assassins and traitors of the country."

Lines of Rumanians filed past the scene after the midnight execution, carried out in the presence of a small crowd, huddled silently beyond the roped-off oblong area.

The government declared the crisis was purely domestic. It had "no foreign complications," a communique said.

Despite this assurance, Rumanians nervously watched the frontiers, troops and frontier guards were on the alert, heavily reinforced. Pedestrians were searched, motorists halted for identification.

Rumanians particularly watched the activities of Germany and Soviet Russia. Germany, they know, wants Rumanian oil, and part of Rumania is former Russian territory. Troops of both nations were across the border in Poland.

The War Today

SECRETARY OF STATE Hull, in Pan American Day speech at World's Fair, declared each American Republic is ready to defend itself.

MAJOR OFFENSIVES appeared imminent on Western Front; French were told that "first phase of war is ended" with German conquest of Poland.

GERMAN-RUSSIAN agreement announced, giving Soviet Russia three-fifths of Poland, while Nazis keep two-fifths, including most of still-besieged Warsaw. Page 14.

ITALY, DISTURBED by events in central Europe, acted strongly to achieve peace before the Bankans flame. Government-controlled newspapers conducted a vigorous press campaign about the "absurdity and criminality" of continuing the war.

GERMANY'S LOSSES in the first three weeks of fighting in Poland were placed at more than 150,000 killed or wounded, including 600 aviators shot down, by the French propaganda chief in a broadcast.

EMBARGO BLOC in Congress planned to conduct "educational campaign" to preserve ban on arms shipments to belligerents.

Nazi Losses In Poland Put At 150,000

400 to 600 Planes Shot Down, French Propagandist Says

By John Elliott.
Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

Paris, Sept. 22.—Germany's losses in the first three weeks of fighting in Poland have been more than 150,000 men killed or wounded, 400 to 600 airplanes shot down and 600 to 700 aviators killed, it was declared by Jean Giraudoux, French propaganda chief, in a radio address tonight. He asserted the German army's equipment "has sustained losses and damage which it will need months to make good."

Furthermore, Giraudoux declared, the mineral gains attained in Poland were more than offset by Germany's loss of rich coal mines of the Saar Valley, which are now under the fire of French artillery.

Poland, he pointed out, produced 970,000 tons of iron in 1938, against the Saar's 2,400,000 and 1,500,000 tons of steel against the Saar's 2,500,000.

Giraudoux emphasized that while in the first 20 days of the war in 1914, France lost 75 per cent of her coal, 81 per cent of her iron, 63 per cent of her steel, 94 per cent of her wool production, 30 per cent of her cotton production and 75 per cent of her sugar, today her economic resources were intact, as her territory is unoccupied.

Thanks to Germany's absorption with the Polish campaign, Giraudoux said French troops, for the first tince since Napoleon, are fighting on German soil. In the 1870 and 1914-18 wars, Germany carried the fighting into France.

From the German point of view, Giraudoux continued, the worst feature of the Polish campaign was that it permitted France to effect mobilization of her army unmolested.

2 Submarines Seen in U. S. Waters, President Reveals

Foreign submarines in American waters, heretofore phantoms of unconfirmed rumor, took on reality yesterday as President Roosevelt announced flatly that two had been sighted, one off New England, the other near Alaska.

Declaring he was making the announcement as a matter of public information, the President told reporters that nationality of neither submarine had been established but added that neither was American.

Immediately Canadian naval officers said "necessary steps" were being taken with relation to the craft near Alaska. From the West Coast came reports that two weeks ago a radio call from a German submarine, close to shore, had been picked up as the undersea vessel apparently sought to contact the German freighter Portland as the latter left Puget Sound, Wash.

Mr. Roosevelt said the warship in the Pacific had been seen off the southern boundary of Alaska along the "inside passage" between the United States and its northern territory, while the one in the Atlantic was 60 or 70 miles south of the tip of Nova Scotia.

Asked whether they were within this country's "territorial waters" he said after a pause that he would stand on his recent statement on the limits of territorial waters—that they extend out as far as the Nation's interests require. Of the naval and Coast Guard patrol recently set up to report on any belligerent ships entering the Western Atlantic waters, he said it extended from off our northern border, off Eastport, Me., to and including the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico.

At the time the patrol was announced two weeks ago it was said the scouting craft would operate

Major Offensive Held Imminent On West Front; Allies Prepared

By G. H. Archambault.
Copyright, 1939, by the New York Times.

Paris, Sept. 22. — Anglo-French forces are fully prepared to meet the German menace on their left flank, according to authoritative information here tonight. That menace is not definite yet, but it seems to have become probable.

Holland and Belgium understand its significance. As a measure of precaution the Dutch have opened sluices in order to flood part of their territory and the area around Utrecht is reported to be already under water. Belgium is following suit. Water from Albert Canal is pouring into the country between Liege and Antwerp, and more Luxemburgers dwelling along the German frontier are taking refuge in the interior.

These reports are pointed to here as indicating lack of faith in Propaganda Minister Goebbel's assurances to the neutral press at Berlin that Germany does not intend to invade either Holland, Belgium or Luxemburg. Since, from a military viewpoint, the German tendency always has been to make history repeat itself, it is recalled that in 1914 the Kaiser's troops did not "invade Luxemburg or Belgium;" they "assured their free passage to France." A glance at the map will show that the flooded areas are calculated to prevent such a passage.

Concentrations at Aachen

Continued German troop concentrations in the Aachen zone are sufficient to warrant the neutral precautions. It was from Aachen that in 1914 Gen. Von Kluck's first army set out with Louvain as its objective as well as Gen. Von Buelow's second army with Huy as its objective. Simultaneously Gen. Von Hausen's third army and the Duke of Wurtemberg's fourth army started from Malmedy, which is in the same zone. The German kronprinze's fifth army began its march from Trier not many miles south of Aachen.

Today in that same Aachen zone troops arrive daily while civilians are ordered to leave, even the very aged and bedridden, according to Belgian reports.

In 1914, Gen. Von Moltke, the younger, accepted Field Marshal Von Schlieffen's legacy of a plan to defeat the French armies by a wide encircling movement by the German right wing, so wide that it had to pass through Belgium. But Von Moltke was not as daring as the old field marshal and he modified the original plan by withdrawing troops from his right to strengthen his left.

Plan Modernized

The Schlieffen plan, in the opinion of many military authorities here, still dominates the thoughts of the German general staff but has been modified to concord with the development of armament.

One noteworthy modification was initiated by Gen. Von Seeckt when he re-created the Reichswehr, namely, passage through Holland, in view of the fact that the Belgians had begun fortifying their frontier bordering on the Reich.

There are no permanent fortifications on the Dutch frontier. In recent months field works have been

U. S. Speeds Army Plans For Defense

President Calls on Governors to Recruit 40,791 Militiamen

By John G. Norris.

The Government quickened the tempo of the billion-dollar arms expansion program in a series of actions yesterday.

Developments were:

Secretary of War Woodring allocated to the States a 40,791-man National Guard increase ordered by President Roosevelt in proclaiming a limited national emergency, and called upon Governors to recruit up to the new limit of 235,000 men.

A redistribution of troops in continental United States was ordered to strengthen defense posts recently weakened to re-inforce the Panama Canal and Puerto Rico.

Warplanes Ordered

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson awarded contracts for new warplanes and munitions totaling $65,000,000.

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics announced that Moffett Field, near Sunnyvale, Calif., had been selected as the site for the new $10,000,000 air research center, and that work will be started as soon as possible.

Employing movie films, new posters and other advertising devices, the Army, Navy and Marine Corps launched a recruiting drive to enroll 100,000 men in the next few months.

Waiting Lists Cited

Despite the large number of regulars and Guardsmen to be enrolled under the program, and additional jobs being opened by industry, officials expect little difficulty in obtaining the necessary men. In many states there are waiting lists for places in the Guard.

New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Illinois, each was called on for more than 2,000 additional Guardsmen.

A 20 per cent increase in units was not authorized as some Guard officials expect. Largest increases went to the anti-aircraft regiments, which will attain close to peacetime strength. The Maryland militia was allowed only 588 additional men, 36 more than the District received and many less than expected. Virginia units will be expanded by 951.

Under the redistribution of troops announced by the War Deparment, five units will change station. The Second Battalion of the Twenty-fifth Field Artillery will move from Madison Barracks, N. Y., to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., next month to replace a battalion of the Seventh Field Artillery, ordered to Puerto Rico. A battalion of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, less one rifle and heavy weapons company, will be transferred from Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., to Madison Barracks.

Shifted to Maine

About the same time, the Sixty-first Coast Artillery (anti-aircraft) will move from Fort Sheridan, Ill., to the harbor defenses of Portland, Me., to replace the Fifth Infantry, sailing October 21 for Panama. Other changes include the transfer of one rifle company of the third battalion, Fourth Infantry, from Fort Lincoln, N. D., to Fort Missoula, Mont., and the movement of all of the Seventy-sixth Field Artillery at Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo., to Camp Ord, Calif. The remainder of the regiment is now at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., close by.

Secretary Woodring said the vacated posts will be garrisoned to their maximum housing capacity.

All but $5,410,344 of the money spent yesterday by the War Department went for airplanes. Ten companies received orders for bombardment, pursuit, observation and training planes. Of the latter nine had previously been announced when tentative awards were made. The other, for $2,843,405, went to the Stearman division of the Boeing Airplane Co., at Wichita, Kans., for primary training planes. Largest among the non-aircraft orders was a $909,400 award to the Hercules Powder Co., for explosives.

Two Air Research Plants

The new aircraft research center will give the Nation two major plants for developing military and civil planes. Army and Navy officials, in urging establishment of a supplemental laboratory to that at Langley Field, Va., told Congress last session that European nations had taken the lead from the United States in the caliber of warplanes as the result of numerous research centers.

The N. A. C. A. said that the Sunnyvale site was selected over 53 others by a special sub-committee headed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. It will occupy about 50 acres of an Army airship station, formerly a base for Navy dirigibles.

Silcox Rejects Offer From Ickes As Undersecretary

F. A. Silcox, chief of the United States Forestry Service, confirmed reports yesterday that he had rejected an offer of the post of Undersecretary of the Interior.

"While expressing gratitude for Secretary Ickes' expression of confidence in me, I feel," Silcox said, "that under the circumstances I should remain where I am."

He said he did not "care" to elaborate on the "circumstances."

President Goes Home To Mark Mother's Fete

President Roosevelt departed by special train last night for his home at Hyde Park, there to spend the week-end with his 85-year-old mother and, somewhat tardily, celebrate her birthday, which was on Thursday.

Arrangements were made for the President to keep in touch with Washington by telephone and receive the latest reports on developments from the State Department and Congressional chieftains. Accompanying Mr. Roosevelt to Hyde Park were assistants to his secretaries, William Hassett and Henry Hannee, a force of stenographers and a communications expert.

Callers and Letters Carrying War Advice Swamp Congress

Blind Woman, Led by Dog, Flies From Coast To Oppose 'Taking People From the Light'; Military Order Calls for Big Army

Into the disquiet of Washington, the Nation's Capital, that watches a war, has come a fluttering of documents urging peace, advocating a strict neutrality, advocating the course America should take.

The flurry reaches the ears of Congressmen when it can and, seeming to increase with the war in Europe, takes form in all manner of manifestos, resolutions, visitations and small marches with placards.

The record of yesterday:

A trim, gray flying ship of the Pennsylvania-Central Air Line alighted on the airport at 11:55 a. m., disgorging its passenger load, among them a young woman, suffering blindness and helped by a Seeing Eye dog named Babe. She smiled into the blackness, introducing herself as Miss Hazel Hurst, president of the Hazel Hurst Foundation for the Blind in Pasadena, Calif. Women, she said, should organize themselves now against war.

"Taking People from the Light"

Many people were blinded in the last war—and now others are about to be blinded, she said. "Taking people from the light is horrible," she said. Mrs. Lindbergh is one of her acquaintances, and she knows a good many Congressmen as friends. She wanted to talk with Mrs. Lindbergh, if possible, and the Congressmen.

"But I am no lobbyist," she said.

She handed reporters a release on an organization in Pasadena called "Keep America Out of the War Clubs." The release contained eight paragraphs from the recent speech by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Babe, the dog, led her along into Washington.

Then, Ralph N. Werner, commander in chief, Military Order of the Firing Squad, urged through a manifesto that all members observe "the following stand:

"That Congress at this special session seriously study our national defense and appropriate sufficient funds to bring our standing Army and Navy up to a point where we may enjoy a neutral position . . . and do so honorably, with malice toward no nation, but by so doing assure our citizenry of our ability on land or sea to defend our Republic and institutions against any aggressor. We hope that it won't be necessary, but if Congress decides that it is necessary to declare war we stand ready to serve as we have in the past."

German Alliance Writes

Then, Congressmen, opening their morning mail, found circulars from the German-American National Alliance, Inc., of Chicago, which, with underscored words, warned them against supporting embargo repeal. Any member voting for "enactment of legislation for the termination of existing laws as a result whereof the sale of arms, munitions and implements of war would be permitted" would be the target of the alliance. Every "lawful means" would be used to defeat such a legislator, it was stated.

Then, 125 Marylanders arrived with banners at Union Station. They had no permit to parade, had to check their peace placards at the station, but gained a motorcycle escort to the Senate Office Building. Again the law, stiffening on demonstrators, dissolved them into groups, and they went calling on Free State Senators and Representatives under leadership of Eric Arlt, president of the Friends and Neighbors League of Baltimore. They wanted the embargo continued and said that several Maryland organizations were represented, among these the Volunteers of Peace.

Meanwhile, Pat McKenna, by whose desk America flows into the White House, was pretty free of tribulation. The police are stopping all at the big iron gates who can't demonstrate some sensible business. It requires a good calling card to get the eye even of a secretary.

House Members Weigh Knitting As Pastime Waiting on Senate

Many From Nearby States Go Back Home For Week-end or Longer, With Nothing on Schedule Till Upper Chamber Has Acted

Members of the House yesterday seriously considered taking up knitting to while away time as they waited for the Senate to act on neutrality act revision.

Many of those from nearby States left town for the week-end or longer, on the theory that the House will be idle for some time. Others said they will do likewise next week if the Senate digs in for a long debate.

Majority Leader Rayburn set his colleagues a precedent by announcing he was going fishing over the week-end. Minority Leader Martin left the Capital for several days.

Old-timers could not recall another instance in which Congress met with nothing on the House schedule. At the beginning of regular sessions commitees usually are busy organizing and members are drawing up bills and resolutions by the hundreds.

A record all-time low was established Thursday when only two resolutions were introduced in the House. Usually it takes several days for clerks to dig out from under the deluge of bills dumped into the House hopper on an opening day.

All the excitement of Thursday had faded yesterday as members occupied themselves with reading accumulated mail, renewing acquaintances, or just sitting. Others closed their offices, and went golfing.

Members who have no established residence in Washington were at loss to know whether to take leases on apartments or houses in anticipation of a long session or to leave their families at home and stop at hotels.

Three hundred and eighty-eight members answered the first roll call, but leaders may have trouble to find a quorum if anyone raises a point of order when the House convenes briefly for successive three-day recesses.

CIO Power Strike Halts Fisher Plant

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 22 (AP).—Five hours after the start of a strike by C. I. O. union employes of the Consumers Power Co., a switch was pulled today in a Flint (Mich.) substation, shutting off power to the Fisher Body Plant, No. 1, of General Motors Corporation.

Operations at the plant closed and a day shift of 5,000 workers was sent home. Power was restored 50 minutes later, after Sheriff Thomas W. Wolcott and two deputies arrived at the sub-station, and the night shift was expected to operate normally.

Blanford Gets Budget Post

The assistant directorship, which carries a salary of $9,000 a year, has been vacant for about four years.

State Machine Backs Long Again For Governor

Baton Rouge, Sept. 22 (AP).—The late Huey P. Long's still dominant political machine, the Louisiana Democratic Association, today chose his brother, Gov. Earl K. Long, for renomination in the January 16, 1940, Democratic primaries.

Among ten announced opponents is Sam H. Jones, 42-year-old attorney from Lake Charles, La., who opened his campaign here last night as a "reform" candidate.

Jones charged Louisiana was ruled by a "carpetbagger regime" worse than anything during reconstruction days.

Pro-Embargo Group Roils Sen. Tydings

"Hell and a Brown Mule, I'll Vote as I Think," He Asserts

By the Associated Press

A vociferous delegation from Maryland demanded yesterday that Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, vote against repeal of the arms embargo, and received this answer:

"I don't care if an army marches up the street, I'm going to vote in accord with whatever conscience I have."

The Maryland Senator was accosted in a Senate Office Building corridor by the delegation, numbering about 50 and consisting mostly of women. Headed by Eric Arlt, of Baltimore, president of the Friends and Neighbors League of Maryland, they insisted that Tydings make known his stand on the arms embargo.

"I can't decide these questions just like that," Tydings said, snapping his fingers.

"Then you're on the fence?" trilled a woman. "You haven't usually been that way."

"There are many things about President Roosevelt I don't like," Tydings answered, "but I'm not going out and talk about him on this issue."

Told that many of the delegation had voted for him, Tydings replied that "I would be awfully small potatoes to vote one way on this question just because somebody voted for me."

"I don't care for hell and a brown mule," he added emphatically. "I'm going to do what I think is right."

All Sides Wrong, Except President, Browder Declares

Cleveland, Sept. 22 (AP).—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, today left a warning against "warmongers," describing Charles A. Lindbergh, William Randolph Hearst and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin as having a "special plan" for war.

Addressing 3,500 persons last night, he said, Lindbergh, Hearst and Father Coughlin "represent monopoly and have their special plan to get America into the war through retaining the neutrality act."

On the other hand, he declared advocates of revision would "hitch America up with the British and get us into war to save the British Empire."

Browder gave "wholehearted indorsement" to President Roosevelt's neutrality message to Congress."

Weatherman Hit As War Cuts Off European Data

By the Associated Press

War, it developed yesterday, is clouding the outlook for the weather man.

Collection of information on which to forecast conditions for the eastern part of the country and the Atlantic Ocean has become more difficult since all European countries have stopped dissemination of "weather." Reports from 100 European points formerly came in daily.

With Canada's entry into the conflict, she started withholding reports about eastern seaboard conditions.

Officials explained that warring nations deem it inadvisable to broadcast data that might help enemy air attacks.

The United States, on the other hand, continues to make American weather information available to any country desiring it, belligerent or neutral.

Brig. Gen. Oliver L. Spaulding, retired chief of the historical section of the Army War College, will conduct a seminar on the military history of the United States at George Washington University this year, it was announced yesterday.

His course will cover the relationship of war to the social and economic life of the Nation.

While the course had not been set up as a result of recent events, the university said, appointment of Gen. Spaulding to teach the seminar was applauded by Gen. G. C. Marshall, Army chief of staff.

U. S. Warehouse Strike Postponed

The threatened strike by six employes in the Government-sponsored Welfare and Recreation Association warehouse because of wage increase demands has been postponed because of a request from the conciliation service of the Labor Department that the matter be arbitrated, the United Office and Professional Workers Union said yesterday. Capt. Frank W. Hoover, association director, said five of the six employes were union members. The association, whih operates the cafeterias in many Federal buildings, employs between 700 and 800 persons.

Rumania: Precariously Neutral

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Ringed by four potential aggressors, Rumania today clung precariously to its neutrality in the face of a possible dangerous international aftermath of the assassination of Premier Calinescu. lengthy accounts of Calinescu's assassination, describing him as a man who was doing his utmost to preserve Rumanian friendship with Germany.)

Observers expected the new premier, Gen. George Argesanu, known as a "tough disciplinarian," to follow Calinescu's advocacy of closer economic co-operation with Britain and France.

The new government headed by Argesanu was named by King Carol within eight hours after the killing.

Carol Accompanies Widow

King Carol accompanied the premier's widow and son in a procession through the city. A funeral oration will be given Sunday.

The shrewd, black-monocled Calinescu was regarded by Balkan diplomats as the strongest figure in post-war Rumania with the exception of King Carol.

In diplomatic quarters it was felt that extinction of the Iron Guard would enable Rumania to present a united front to parry Germany's economic demands and Russia's territorial ambitions as well as continue to check agitation from Bulgaria and Hungary.

Hull Wires Condolences

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hull expressed yesterday his "deepest sympathy" over the assassination of Rumanian Premier Calinescu.

He cabled the Rumanian minitser for foreign affairs, Gregorie Gafencu:

"It is with deep regret that I have received the sad news of the untimely death of Prime Minister Calinescu at the hands of an assassin. On behalf of my fellow countrymen and in my own name I extend deepest sympathy to you and through you to the people of Rumania."

Sen. Lee Presses Bills to Remove Profits of War

While the Senate Democratic steering and policy committees unaimously voted yesterday to restrict extra session legislation to the neutrality issue, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, reminded leaders that he sought early action on his two bills designed to prevent excessive war profits.

Lee asked that his war profits tax bill be re-referred from the Senate Finance Committee to the Senate Military Affairs Committee, where it was originally considered. It was agreed to await the return to Washington of Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, who is confined to his Mississippi home by illness. Harrison, it was learned, will leave his sick bed to fly back to Washington if his vote is needed to insure Senate Foreign Relations Committee report of the Administration's neutrality bill.

about 200 miles off shore, and that information they relayed about belligerent ships would be communicated to American shipping and to the embassies of the foreign craft, with notice that American ships were in the areas where the foreign vessels were operating.

Mr. Roosevelt joked with reporters about the possible nationality of the submarines. They might be Swiss, he said. When a reporter suggested they might be Canadian, he replied, that they might be Bolivian or Afghan. Canadian officials announced later that Canada has no submarines.

The President suggested that reporters might learn the nationality of the ships of they kept on questioning. However, he warned one not to be too nosey.

While declining to give sources of his information he said they were reliable.

The Aberdeen (Wash.) World said in a news article yesterday that the harbor radio station had reported to the Coast Guard that the radio calls were from a German submarine only 50 to 75 miles off the coast. The calls were said to have been clear and easily identified and "too authentic" for a possibility of mistake. The German freighter Portland, which the submarine was said to have been trying to contact, disappeared after leaving Everett, Wash.

From Ketchikan, Alaska, the International News Service quoted Capt. Everett Hudson, of the seiner Mary Eleanor, and members of his crew as reporting they had seen a submarine in Clarence Straits at 7 p. m. Tuesday. It was only 1 mile from their own craft, the captain and crew said.

On Thursday Boston reported the sudden ordering to sea of the naval destroyer Leary. The sailing was officially described as "routine" and "just a part of the exercises of the neutrality patrol—but orders for the sailing came so quickly that it was necessary for Boston police radio cars to assist in the round-up of the crew.

Denied By Attaches

Here, German, French and Japanese naval attaches expresed doubt that the reported submarines were of their respective fleets. Their comments, made to International News Service, were:

Vice Admiral Robert Withoeft-Emden (German): "I have not the faintest idea what nationality they might have been, but I am convinced they were not German. Our submarines are of limited tonnage and lack the cruising range for operations in American Atlantic and in Pacific waters. Could they refuel at sea? About that I know nothing."

Commander Pierre Benech (French): "I do not know for certain whose submarines they were, but that they are French is very unlikely."

Capt. Kanji Ogawa (Japanese): "To suppose they were Japanese is absurd. Japanese submarines are presently operating only in home waters and possibly on details connected with the Chinese incident."

Capt. L. C. A. St. Curzon-Howe (British): "I haven't the remotest idea whose submarines they are.

Warsaw Eats Horse Meat And Fights On

Heroic Example Cheers Poland's Weary Refugees

By the Associated Press

Vereczke, Hungary (at the Polish frontier), Sept. 22.—Soviet Russian troops reached the Hungarian frontier at sunset today in the backwash of a vast new flood of Polish military and civilian refugees who turned border areas into a chaos of suffering and misery.

It was estimated that fully 80,000 Polish soldiers anr civilians have now found sanctuary on Hungarian soil.

Meanwhile, the Warsaw radio station broadcast that Poland's capital still was holding out against the Germans as the third week of its siege began.

The invading Soviet troops took up positions along nearly 90 miles of the Hungarian frontier.

Developments in the refugee scenes included:

The arrival of two Polish divisions totaling 15,000 men at Korosmezo; reports that 120,000 Polish refugees including many Jews, were trapped at the corner of the Rumanian-Hungarian frontier, where they were denied entrance into Rumania, with 75,000 now surging toward Hungary; a Polish bombing plane landed near Korosmeco, with two of the crew dead from fighting off German pursuit ships.

Million in Besieged City

Polish troops retreating into Hungary through this village were cheered by the news that the Warsaw radio was functioning. A shrill air raid alarm broadcast from Warsaw sounded clear in unmistakable evidence that German warplanes once more were attacking Poland's last major stronghold.

Defiant utterances and appeals to fight unto death followed the sounding of the alarm as a million persons, locked inside the city which has lived through two weeks of death and destruction, continued to fight.

The wet, bedraggled and weary Polish troops explained that they fled because they were unable as small groups to inflict any damage either physical or moral on the enemy. But Warsaw has become a symbol to the tired, dispirited soldiers, the more so since many have families, relatives or friends in the city.

People Eating Horses

"War is not settled by quick victories—death is better than the loss of liberty," the Warsaw broadcaster declared from the city where cavalry horses have become food, where the sound of bombs is now routine, where collapsing buildings and new groups of dead and wounded can only be judged routine.

Calmly, the radio recited incidents of courage in the Polish capital, while on the outskirts of the city barricaded Polish troops fought on during one more air raid.

Personal messages gave a clew to the human tragedies within the city.

"I am wounded and in the hospital, but will soon be better," said one. "God bless you wherever you are."

Announcers in their patriotic appeals to civilians emphasized the moral significance of a continued defense of the city as a contribution to the future history of Poland.

Dramatically, the radio voice told the beseiged city how they were responsible for the restoration of Poland's pride as a nation and proof to the world that the Poles could fight.

Lwow Troops Fight On

Meanwhile, reports that Warsaw was the only remaining point of Polish resistance came from refugee units crossing the border.

Soldiers reported a broken section of the Polish army still was holding out valiantly west of Lwow although it was being gradually cut to pieces through land and air attacks. Officers told how this group, encircled on three sides by Germans, was unable to retreat eastward because of Soviet forces and was still clinging grimly to shallow, hastily dug defenses in hilly forest country.

Lieut. Gen. Sosnowski, who was second in command of the Polish forces, is in charge of this defense, according to reports reaching here. He had charge of four divisions in Lwow area when the city was surrounded and flew to join the present group of defenders.

Tremendous losses were said to have been suffered by the group. Grimly, officers merely show hands as the story was recounted.

Micislav Borecki, a Polish priest, told how Ukrainian bands touched off a mine under a bridge at Kamionka, 30 miles northwest of Lwow, as 145 refugees were crossing the span. He said only 35 survived the explosion, while 11 heavily loaded buses crashed into the wreckage and mass of twisted human bodies.

Fear Rules the Land

Herded together aimlessly, refugees throughout this area sought rest in barns, railway stations, carts and automobiles. They talk in whispers, still under the effects of the days of fear.

Radios in the overloaded automobiles were kept tuned to the beleaguered Warsaw station.

As the homeless huddled around crude campfires, the broadcast drowned out suddenly at 9:20 p. m. (3:20 p. m. E. S. T.) by songs and noises from a stronger station identified as German.

100 Americans, 178 Diplomats Flee Warsaw, Tell of Siege

By Brooke Peters

Copyright, 1939, by New York Times.

Koenigsberg, Sept. 22. — Three nerve-wracking weeks of rodent life, to which the constant German bombardments of Warsaw had subjected them, are discernible on the faces of some 1,400 neutral residents of Poland's former capital, including 178 members of neutral diplomatic missions and between 100 and 200 Americans who arrived at this East Prussian city today after an all-night journey by train and auto.

Amazingly, not a single neutral has been reported killed in the three weeks of bombardment which wrecked railroad stations, bridges, private buildings, and kept the city illuminated each night with a sinister red glow of burning buildings and the explosive flashes of bursting shells. That they escaped alive, refugees now packed in Koenigsberg's hotels and pensions term "miraculous."

At first the air bombardment was concentrated on the capital's rail stations, bridges and other strategic points. Anti-aircraft guns were posted all over the capital. Some 20 to 30 German planes, according to refugees, were brought down by these batteries.

Attacking as they were, under this Polish fire, however, the accuracy of the German planes was not so good. Many of the bombs they dropped, therefore, went wide of targets and inflicted untold damage upon property and exacted a heavy toll of life among the civilian population.

Regular Polish artillery batteries were posted all over Warsaw. When the German artillery got within range of the city it too began a bombardment which lasted a fortnight.

Many shells landed on private dwellings, offices and government buildings. The American consulate had been hit many times before it was evacuated September 6 in favor of the embassy building, so directly that consulate officers miraculously escaped injury or death—that it was practically demolished. The American flag over it looked like the battle flag of front line regiments.

Three thousand Polish civilians including many women and children are estimated to have lost their lives during these bombardments up to yesterday. The shortage of food is so acute that horses killed by stray shots are being used for food. Contamination of the water supply in some sections of the city has produced typhoid fever. All civilian dead are buried in public parks and squares.

On September 6, following the departure of the American diplomatic corps with the Polish government to its new capital, the American Consulate, headed by Consul General John K. Davis went into the Embassy quarters—because the cellar of the latter building was believed safe.

Here until their departure yesterday afternoon, the American Consul officers supervised the protection of American life and as far as possible, property.

U. S. Agents Open Drive on Foreign Spies

Spearhead of Attack Reported Aimed at 'The Duchess' in N. Y.

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 22.—All channels of escape—on both seaboard and on the international borders to the north and south—were being plugged by the Federal Government tonight as the United States massed investigating agencies in a concerted drive against the menace of foreign spies.

The spearhead of the attack is being directed toward the headquarters of an espionage ring located in a New York district populated by Germans and believed to be under the guiding genius of a woman Nazi agent—a former medical student from Berlin, known only to the spy hunters as "The Doc" and "The Duchess."

Agents are close to the hideout, where they expect to find evidence concerning the reported theft of a number of Army and Navy secrets, as well as proof that a German syndicate is operating here against the British and French military and naval forces.

Revelation of the impending raid furnished an explanation for the strange order issued by Italian Line officials early this week when the liner Rex was delayed in sailing to remove a number of German nationals from the vessel.

"The Duchess," according to information received by the F. B. I., had been tipped off that her activities were known and had planned to flee to Italy.

The alleged "Mata Hari" of the Nazi syndicate is said to be a close friend of Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, leader of the espionage combination smashed by G-men last year, and now occupies the position held by him.

Two other agents are being sought, one known as "Volby" and the other as "Oscky."

British agents are working with the American counter-espionage forces following the detention of a suspect in London.

British authorities are said to have transmitted to Washington considerable information regarding the formation of a bureau to keep Nazi U-boats informed of the sailings of British craft from American ports.

G-men and investigators of the Federal Communications Commission are checking all powerful radio transmitters to determine whether any are being used to transmit spy codes to Germany.

The Government's real concern is over a report that foreign agents are deeply interested in obtaining a working plan of the American industrial mobilization. The loss of important military and naval papers from Washington is a known fact.

This report was circulated today in The Hour, a publication devoted exclusively to information on conditions in the third Reich and Nazi activities in the Americas, among other things, said:

"In the disappearance and ultimate sale to Germany and Japan of the United States Navy Department secrets, a highly prized code scrambling machine may be said to have served as the first important lead to the discovery of the existence of the ring. More than $1,000,000 was spent by the Navy to perfect the machine."

U. S. Vice Consul Sticks to Duties At Warsaw Desk

Holding his post in besieged, wartorn Warsaw is U. S. Vice Consul Thaddeus H. Chylinski, the State Department revealed yesterday.

With him in the chancery of the American Embassy are a "number of other Amercans," said the first communication received for ten days by the department from Americans in the city.

Seven United States officials, whose whereabouts the department had been unable to ascertain, were reported on their way to Koenigsberg, Germany, presumably by automobile.

American Charge d'Affaires Alexander C. Kirk, at Berlin, cabled the department its first word of the Americans in Warsaw. Vice Consul Douglas Jenkins, arriving at Koenigsberg from Warsaw, reported to Kirk that seven officials had left the Polish capital. En route to Koenigsberg were Consul General John K. Davis; Consuls George J. Haering and William M. Cramp; Vice Consuls M. Williams Blake, Tomlin Bailey and Carl Birkeland, and Dr. Waldemar J. A. Wickham, of the U. S. Public Health Service.

200 'Mutineers' Removed From Polish Liner

Ship Sails With Third Of Crew, Reportedly On British War Mission

By the Associated Press

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The World War hero—captain of the Polish liner Batory and 200 crew members today were removed from the vessel by Yonkers police who were told the crew had mutinied against an order to sail the ship to Canada for war-time service.

The full story of the "mutiny" and the orders which reputedly prompted it was shrouded in official secrecy. But several hours after the ploice intervention, the Batory sailed down the Hudson River from the anchorage it had occupied since September 5.

Police Capt. Henry S. Murphy said he boarded the liner and removed part of the crew at the request of Polish Consul General Dr. Sylvester Gruszka. Murphy said Capt. Eustazy Borkowski, who was decorated 12 times by four governments for bravery in the World War, reported the mutiny, saying many of the crew refused to sail. Relieved of his command, he was replaced by First Officer Francinzek Szudzinski. Capt. Borkowski was a member of the Russian volunteers.

Taken Over by British

Murphy added he was told the Batory, homeless since Germany seized the Polish port of Gdynia, had been "taken over" by the British admiralty, which had ordered it to proceed to Halifax to take on supplies for transportation to England.

Both the British and Polish consulates in New York refused to discuss the matter in detail.

The British consulate said the admiralty had not informed it of any order regarding the Batory, but spokesmen in New York and Washington said it "was quite logical" for the admiralty to take charge of the ship since England and Poland are allies.

Polish Vice Consul Jan Scaghino asserted there had been no disorder aboard the ship and, despite the report by police, said no police had boarded her. He termed the crew's action "a little sit-down strike."

100 Aboard as She Sails

"Part of the crew didn't want to sail so they went ashore," he added. Scaghino said also that Capt. Borkowski had "a terrific temper" but "left the ship quietly."

Borkowski, in tears when he left his vessel, was too upset to discuss the incident."

"I can't talk today," he said. "Maybe tomorrow or some other day I tell you the whole truth."

Collector of the port Harry M. Durning said the Batory had cleared customs for a noon sailing. One hundred crew members were aboard when she pulled away at 4:38 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Durning and Immigration Commissioner Byron Uhl both emphasized that the U. S. Government had nothing to do with the case.

Captain Noted for Rescues

Uhl said the 200 crew members, many of them women and some minors, would be permitted to stay in the United States 60 days under a law governing foreign seamen.

The Batory, sister ship of the Pilsudski, was built in 1936 at Trieste in a barter deal giving the Italians $6,000,000 worth of Polish coal. The 14,287-ton vessel is known to many Americans for its West Indies cruise trade as well as transatlantic service.

The Pilsudski is safe in "an English port," the Gdynia-American Line said. The two ships are the leaders of the Polish merchant fleet of 96 vessels.

Capt. Borkowski, 55, a 6-foot 2-inch veteran of 38 years at sea, speaks 16 languages and holds the Polish cross of honor. He sailed Russian ships for many years and is noted for rescue work.

International Law Seeks to Mitigate War

No Means but Force Exists to Enforce It; Violated Many Times

By Andrue Berding

Associated Press Staff Writer

International law, which President Roosevelt said the United States should follow in the present European war, is the slow outgrowth of custom and compacts among nations, generally arising from war and conquest.

The President told Congress Thursday that "repeal of the (arms) embargo and return to international law are the crux of this issue."

International law developed largely from the protests of neutral nations against invasions of their peace and security by countries at war.

In olden times there was only one international law—force. But out of the horrors of the thirty years' war in the seventeenth century rose a spirit of protest against international anarchy.

No Means of Enforcement

Hugo Grotius, an eminent Dutch jurist who died in 1645, is generally credited with being the father of international law, which has evolved through the centuries as a set of principles governing the sovereign rights of nations.

But there is no court for enforcing it. The international court at The Hague conciliates differences between nations, but it cannot enforce its decisions.

International law depends for its effective execution primarily on approval or condemnation by world opinion of the actions of certain nations.

Since much of international law originated by way of protest against the anarchy engendered by war, it is concerned largely with rules which seek to mitigate the rigor of war conduct. Many of them have been embodied in treaties.

The rights of neutrals were outlined in the Treaty of London of 1909, which many nations, including the United States, signed, but few ratified. The treaty often was violated in the World War but still is regarded as a fundamental thesis.

A Part of U. S. Law

Under it neutrals had the right to ship war materials to any belligerent, but at the same time any belligerent had the right to seize such materials en route to his enemy or to an adjacent neutral for transshipment.

The treaty defined conditions under which a ship could be sunk and outlined what measures must be taken to assure the safety of its crew and passengers. It described blockades, contraband and unneutral acts.

The submarine convention of 1936, which still is in force, defined measures for the safety of crew and passengers which a submarine must take before it torpedoes or shells a ship.

Other agreements or pledges cover attacks on civilian populations, bombing of unfortified towns from the air and the use of poison gases and bacteria.

American courts regard international law as part of the law of the land and it has been so recognized in Supreme Court opinions.

British Heroes' Sons Are Ready for War

Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

London, Sept. 22.—The names of Jellicoe, Beatty and Haig, touchstones of the last war, appear again on the rosters of the British forces.

The sons of these leaders of 1914-1918 are serving or waiting to serve their country. Earl Beatty, whose wife is an American, recently resigned a commission in the yeomanry and is a lieutenant commander in the navy. Earl Haig is a subaltern in the army. Earl Jellicoe, standing by, waiting to be called to the colors, is a member of the officers' cadet reserves of the Coldstream Guards.

Rep. Schafer Threatens to Call Up Lynching Bill in Move to Expand Extra Session Agenda

Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, last night told The Post he intends to see that the highly controversial anti-lynching bill is called up for action on October 9.

If Schafer makes good his threat, he will be blasting the expectation and hope of most House members to limit the special session strictly to the neutrality issue. Even leaders of the anti-lynch forces were placed in an embarrassing position, as they already had indicated they would not bring up their bill in the near future.

However, Schafer asserted that the anti-lynch bill constitutes "a sort of neutrality bill—neutrality for the South." He said he would give Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, author of the measure, an opportunity to call up the bill, but Gavagan has stated he will not do so unless the session is "unduly prolonged" or other non-neutrality legislation is introduced.

Under House rules, Schafer has the right to call up the bill, as he was one of the signatories of the petition discharging the Judiciary Committee from consideration of the measure.

Meanwhile, Administration leaders in the House predicted swift and sure passage of any Senate bill containing repeal of the arms embargo and establishment of a "cash and carry" policy for exports. They maintained that enough Democratic votes had switched since last session to insure an Administration victory.

They were further heartened by the thought that the bill, as it comes to the House, will be in the form of a conference report, which is expected to be far more in accordance with Administration views than the bill passed by the House last session. Only an hour's debate is permitted on a conference report.

Opponents of the President's program, however, asserted that it was they who had gained in votes. Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, author of an amendment to the House bill forbidding export of arms and munitions to belligerents, said he knew of some changes in favor of embargo.

In contrast, Chairman Sabath of the Rules Committee said he knew eight Democrats who will vote with the Administration now but who previously had supported the embargo.

One factor that appeared to be of increasing importance in the attitude of House members toward the embargo was their mail.

Anglo-French Supreme War Council Meets

'Complete Agreement' On Co-ordinating Operations Reached

By Robert Bunnelle
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 22.—The supreme war council of Great Britain and France met in England today and announced "complete agreement" on the course to be followed in the European war.

A communique from No. 10 Downing Street said:

"A meeting of the supreme war council took place today in England.

"It was attended by M. Daladier, M. Dautry, Gen. Gamelin and Admiral Darlan, representing France, and Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Halifax and Lord Chatfield, representing Great Britain.

"Two sittings were held, in the morning and the afternoon.

"The developments which have taken place since the meeting on September 14 were reviewed and their effect on the future course of events estimated. There was complete agreement on the course to be followed, both to meet these developments and to give effect to the Allied plans.

"The supreme war council considered the question of munitions and supplies and agreement was reached on procedure for coordinating and perfecting the arrangements to be made by the two governments."

Thus the communique indicated the importance of the meeting of the council, consisting of the premiers of France and England, Daladier and Chamberlain; the commander in chief of the British and French armies, Gen. Gustave Gamelin; France's naval chief, Admiral Jean Darlan; France's armament minister, Raoul Dautry; Great Britain's foreign secretary, Lord Halifax, and Britain's minister for the co-ordination of defense, Lord Chatfield.

Since the September 14 meeting of the war council, Russia has invaded Poland and Rumania's Prime Minister Calinescu has been assassinated.

Today's protracted meeting took place as Great Britain, building her domestic sinews to "give strength behind the thrust" of her armies, told her workers "the increasing momentum of the national effort will call upon all the resources of our man and woman power."

Duke Gets Military Post

Other announcements by the ministry included:

B. W. A. Massey, British vice consul at Poznan, Poland, is missing. All other British consular officers in Poland have left safely.

The Duke of Windsor has arrived in France where he was scheduled to take a military post as major general. There was no indication what his assignment would be.

Canada is expanding her air service training, her anti-submarine defenses and gearing up her heavy industry to facilitate supplies of essential materials.

Britain expressed "profound shock" in a condolence message to Rumania on the assassination of Premier Calinescu.

A ministry of labor communique reporting 76,000 more men had found work while 175,000 women lost jobs between August 14 and September 11 because of wartime dislocations, predicted adjustments would come with development of Britain's war program.

"No Room for Idle Hands"

Reinforcing this view was a broadcast by Sir Samuel Hoare, lord privy seal, asserting that in Great Britain's war effort "there will be no room for idle hands" and adding, "I am certain that at no distant date there is scarcely an able-bodied man or woman whose services the community will not need. Be patient, therefore, if you have sought war work and have not yet found it. The war work will soon be seeking you."

The ministry of information reported that a number of German officers, prisoners of war, had been brought to England and placed in a prison camp. Other prisoners, said the ministry's communique, were taken to another camp.

The announcement recalled that on September 15 Chamberlain told the House of Commons prisoners had been taken in British successes against submarines.

The first victory for the Royal Air Force on the Western Front in the 1939 European war was announced in a government communique. It was also the first official indication that British planes on the Western Front had been active in other than reconnaissance operations.

"During the course of air operations Wednesday, September 20, one German fighter was shot down by our aircraft in France," said a ministry of information communique.

Following the statement of the owners of the 1,567-ton British steamer Arkleside that she had been "lost at sea" and her crew brought ashore, the ministry of information reiterated that "energetic measures" were being taken against German submarines.

Methods developed since the end of the World War are being used in the operations against submarines, the ministry continued, but the nature of those methods was not disclosed.

The ministry noted losses at the beginning of hostilities were understandable because undersea craft had been stationed at strategic places, but added that submarines were "very vulnerable."

With bannerlines, editorials and cartoons British newspapers reflected popular belief in Britain that President Roosevelt's message to Congress eventually would result in making American planes, munitions and war supplies available to Britain and France.

The publications were careful, however, to make no definite predictions on that possibility, and there was no official reaction.

French Dissolve Lebanon Assembly

Damascus, Syria, Sept. 22 (AP).—The French high commissioner today suspended the constitution of the Lebanese Republic and dissolved its Parliament "for the duration of the war."

built. Reports from Amsterdam today say these works are being strengthened feverishly along three successive lines. Holland has 385 miles of frontier bordering on Germany. Defenses along there were described recently by the New York Times Hague correspondent as follows:

"Hundreds of concrete pillboxes were skillfully camouflaged. Anti-aircraft guns surrounded the towns in wide circles. Roads leading to the frontiers are mined as well as the bridges. Huge blocks of concrete obstruct the high roads at certain spots within the range of the artillery.

Trees Are Mined

"Where natural defenses such as canals nad marshes are lacking, tank traps have been prepared as well as mined trees that will fall across the roads as barriers several hundred yards deep."

The fundamental difference between present conditions and those of 1914 is that both the Belgian and the Dutch armies have been mobilized for nearly three weeks.

For this reason, competent observers incline to the belief that if any neutral territory is violated Luxemburg might well be the first despite difficulties for troop movements presented by the Belgian Ardennes (ten German divisions followed that route in 1914). These observers point out that part of the present Western Front adjoining the Luxemburg border continues very active.

By Taylor Henry.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 22.—A major offensive appeared imminent on the Western Front tonight.

It apparently was a toss-up, however, whether the French or Germans would strike the first blow. All political signs pointed to the French; military advices seemed to indicate the Germans would take the initiative.

In the most dramatic developments since the war started, Premier Daladier, with Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of French and British armies; Admiral Jean Darlan, chief of the French navy staff, and Minister of Armament Raoul Dautry, flew to England for two urgent conferences of the Allied Supreme War Council on production of arms and ammunition.

The fact that a communique, issued at Daladier's office after he returned from the meeting, concerned co-ordinated French and British arms production led to the belief the allies were getting ready for an offensive in which large amounts of arms and ammunition would be needed.

"First Phase Ended"

During the evening the French government told the nation in a broadcast by Commissioner of Information Jean Giraudoux that "the first phase of the war is ended" and Germany faces "a war of which it has lost command."

The broadcast strengthened the belief the French were ready to press their initial advantage which he said carried the war to German soil "for the first time since Napoleon the First."

On the Eastern Front, Giraudoux said, Germany had suffered more than 150,000 army casualties, 400 to 600 planes lost and 600 to 700 pilots killed.

Meanwhile, he said, French mobilization had been completed and the war carried to Germany on the Western Front.

French Cite Threat to Saar

In the economic field, he went on, Germany had lost more by the French threat to the rich Saar Basin than she had gained in the occupation of Poland.

In the propaganda sphere he called Germany's position "impossible to pardon to neutrals."

It was the first detailed account of operations to be given the French public since France and Britain declared war on Germany September 3. Military observers noted that it coincided with military information relayed from the front by air observers who reported it was noticeable from the air that German divisions were reduced in numbers by casualties on the Eastern Front.

Information from the war front gave the impression that it might well be the Germans who would launch an offensive.

Both French and German forces were reported tonight to be moving up big guns south and east of Saarbruecken, key German industrial city and apparently the immediate goal of French army penetration into the German Saarland.

Skirmishes Break Lull

Earlier French military advices had indicated that French pressure against the city had been renewed; a noncommittal communique hinted that French maneuvers and advance guard skirmishes had broken a recent lull.

However, there was an ominous quiet reported tonight along the Western Front and even the skirmishes in the no-man's-land between fortifications had slackened.

Soviets Admit Resistance Was Slight in Poland

Communique Says Soldiers Surrendered In Large Groups

By G. E. R. Gedye.
Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Sept. 22.—That Polish troops did not attempt serious resistance to Russian occupation of Polish Ukraine and White Russia is confirmed despite high sounding phrases about the "fighting spirit," "victory" "the powerful technique of the Red army" in official Soviet dispatches, one of which from Kieff, puts it this way:

"Polish troops surrendered in large groups. Not infrequently one may observe how a small group of Red army men conveyed 500 prisoners of which some even carried arms."

The latest communique from the Ukraine announces the occupation of Pinsk and the clearing up of Lwow and Sarna. Foreign radio reports indicated some days ago the Soviet troops actually met the Germans at Brest-Litovsk which is far to the west of Pinsk. Foreign military circles here are generally much surprised at the news that the Soviet troops only yesterday reached Pinsk.

Departure Imminent

It strengthens the general feeling that difficulties had arisen between the Soviet and the German forces concerning the delimitation line to which the Russians should advance and because of a dispute a German military mission was sent to Moscow. It is reported that the departure of this mission is imminent; consequently, it is presumed that differences have been adjusted.

It is generally found difficult to believe the Germans willingly consented that the Russians should be occupying the vital railway center of Lwow, controlling as it does all roads and railways to Rumania. Important Galician oil wells lie east of Lwow and if the Russians are able to insist on occupying up to that frontier, these should also fall to them.

Pravda publishes an informative article describing the political and economic cultural importance of Lwow. Great emphasis was laid on the enthusiasm with which the non-Polish population of occupied areas received the Red armies.

Peasants Offer Flowers

Many photographs—some from the American press photographic standpoint, rather naively posed—show the enthusiastic welcome accorded to troops by peasants offering flowers, etc.

The staff of the Polish consulate from Leningrad, having at last succeeded in obtaining rail transport, arrived today. I understand the Soviet commissariat for foreign affairs finally decided to recognize the diplomatic status of the Polish Embassy and consular staffs in the issue of laissez passes. The date of their departure depends upon arrival at Minsk of consular personnel that is still without transport.

Convention Scheduled

The Association of American Cemetery Superintendents has voted to hold its convention in Washington next year, officials announced yesterday. The association last met in Washington in 1905.

ing men and of our asylums.

The number of our civilian casualties is important. It runs into the tens of thousands. And the major number of the casualties are civilians. Among the casualties women and children predominate.

We have food supplies on hand, but the volume is such that we have resorted to careful rationing.

There is an extreme shortage of milk and dairy products. This shortage naturally has endangered gravely, the health and even the lives of our infants and our children.

The health and lives of the mothers of families also is endangered by the lack of foods they need to care for their young.

The only Germans we see are the pilots of the German bombing planes which bombard our city day and night.

Our troops, of course, see the enemy. They have been bravely defending our city for three weeks and they will continue to do so.

I firmly believe that the help of the civilized world for Poland will be effective soon and that this help will save Warsaw from entire destruction.

Starzynski, small-statured but sturdy, was elected mayor of Warsaw in 1933 after a bitter political fight. The first thing he did was to tour Europe's capitals, with the idea of making his own the most beautiful of all. For six years he worked tirelessly toward this goal and he had made great progress.

When German columns neared Warsaw, however, he did not hesitate to give the order which he knew would result in his beloved city falling in ruins. His order was: "Defend the city to the last gun and the last man."

Church of the Week

Falls Church Presbyterians Cut Debt, Renovate Auditorium

25-Cents-a-Week Plan Is Helping, Says Minister

A $10,000 church auditorium renovation and debt-reduction project is now under way at Falls Church Presbyterian Church.

EASTMAN

Repainting and redecorating of the interior, replacing the ceiling with beamwork, installation of new lighting fixtures and other details are planned, actual work on which will start very shortly, according to the Rev. Alton B. Altfather, pastor since 1924.

The fact that parishoners raised more than $25,000 in 24 hours in cash and pledges to build the present stone edifice when its membership stood at only 125, gives an idea of the kind of support guaranteed this project, to which members are contributing through lump pledges and a weekly 25-cent unit system.

This idea, said the clergyman yesterday, will secure the necessary funds in three years. H. A. Hollins, elder, chairman of the finance committee, is now picking his right-hand men—and women.

Unlike many churches, Falls Church congregation has no space problem, being concerned only with revamping and using what is available. Under the three-floor, 20-room educational unit is a 76x30x10 basement, now unsuitable for occupancy, which the young people intend to convert into a recreational hall, with bowling alleys and other sports equipment.

Dr. Altfather is quite proud of his young people, whose activities center around the Christian Endeavor Society and who are known as the Round Table Fireside and Pioneer groups, led by Howard King, Gloria Schuette and Betty Ann Meyer, respectively. An automatic control box for the church sign on the lawn is one of the youths' contributions.

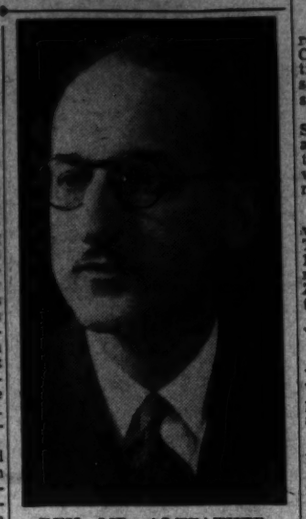
The pastor peppered his interview with descriptions of amusing incidents of his Falls Church ministry, the only pulpit he ever has served.

There was the occasion when the man regularly employed to repair the pipe organ grew too large in girth to slide through the small aperture leading to the rear of the instrument. Sad to relate, he lost his job.

He also recalls that it was bad psychology to place a guest book in the lobby of the church and ask worshippers to "sign it." Response was nil. However, after suggesting they "put their names" in it, it became quickly filled.

Leaders of the Sunday school, which has an enrollment of 205 and average attendance of 130 scholars, are Frank H. Eastman, superintendent; Edwin P. White, Mrs. Walter L. Phillips, H. E. Brown, jr., and Mrs. D. K. Grille. There are six departmental heads.

Mrs. A. N. Adams is president of the Bykota Society, a young women's group meeting in the evenings, and which not so long ago presented the pastor with a mimeographing machine. Mrs. Deming J. Shear is president of the Woman's Missionary Society; Mrs. F. A. Anderson, the Ladies' Aid, and P. A. Wells, the men's Bible class, of which D. J. Shear is teacher. Horace E. Brown is church treasurer, while Donald S. Parris, Albert R. Ware and Mrs. Theodore R. Naftziger are chairmen of the board of deacons, board of trustees and board of deaconesses, respectively. Maj. Morton Macartney is director of the budget and Mrs. James W. Brown leads the choir.



REV. MR. ALTFATHER.

Native of Berlin (Pa.), the Falls Church cleric studied at Franklin and Marshall Academy, Lancaster, and later received his B. A. degree from Valparaiso (Ind.) University, his bachelor of theology degree from Princeton and his D. D. from Salem (W. Va.) College.

Not knowing that pregraduation marriages were forbidden without consent of the head of the seminary, he risked his diploma by marrying four days before that event. Assuming the position in Falls Church after graduation, the couple was tendered a gala reception by the congregation and presented with a Ford as a gift.

They now have two children, Barbara, 9, and Nancy Ann, 5, and live in a home beside the church at Broad and Fairfax streets.

The Rev. Mr. Altfather will speak at 11 a. m. today on "Life's Greatest Tragedy."

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS
"LET THE LOWER LIGHTS BE BURNING"
P. P. Bliss
"Brightly beams our Father's mercy
From His lighthouse evermore;
But to us he gives the keeping
Of the lights along the shore."
Chorus
"Let the lower lights be burning!
Send the gleam across the wave!
Some poor fainting, struggling seaman
You may rescue, you may save."
P. P. Bliss, listening to D. L. Moody tell the thrilling story of a shipwreck in the Cleveland harbor because the lower lights on the lighthouse were out, was inspired to write the words and music for this song when Mr. Moody said, "Brethren, the Master will take care of the great lighthouse -- let us keep the lower lights burning."

Industry Adds 550,000 Jobs In 2 Months

Increase More Than Seasonal, Partly Due To Europe, Says Perkins

American industry absorbed 550,000 workers between mid-July and mid-September, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported yesterday. The bulk of this employment gain—approximately 300,000—occurred between the middle of August and the middle of this month, she said.

Miss Perkins summoned the press to present these and other statistics, based upon a special survey just completed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Only about one-third of this increase is attributable to the seasonable rise that usually takes place at this time of the year," the Secretary declared, adding that "a part of it is based upon the European situation."

Confers With Labor Chiefs

She revealed that discussions are being held with leaders of organized labor to the end that existing agencies, Government and private, may be expanded and coordinated during the period of "limited emergency" declared by the President.

Avoiding use of the word "war," she said one of the problems under consideration is whether this country faces a labor shortage. The National Employment Service, she said, is one of the agencies organized since the World War which can be of great service in furnishing a census of workers.

She said, in response to questioning, that she has heard of no plans to outlaw strikes or compel mediation of labor disputes in event of a national emergency.

Recent employment gains, said Miss Perkins, have been greatest in cotton goods factories, steel, aircraft and shipbuilding, meat packing, automobile plants and canning factories.

Virginia Gains in August

"Special preliminary reports," she asserted, "also indicate that in some manufacturing industries, such as woolens and worsteds, some seasonal declines in employment were reported."

Taking the 3-year period from 1923 to 1925, inclusive, as a 100 per cent standard, the employment index for August, 1939, was 96.4, the highest it has been since December, 1937. The corresponding pay roll index was 89.9, highest since November, 1937.

Virginia showed a 3.9 per cent employment gain in August, largely in the manufacturing and wholesale trade. Maryland's employment figure rose 2 per cent in the same period but the District showed a 2.2 per cent decline.

Hopkins Reports Rapid Increase In Retail Sales

Reports of a rapid upsurge in retail sales, opportunities for a "tremendous" gain for the United States in South American trade, and a marked increase in wholesale commodity prices came from three sources last night.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins reported a survey covering 21,562 stores in 22 States disclosed a "consistent increase" in retail sales in the first eight months of this year, as compared to 1928, with a 7 per cent increase during the "war scare" days of August over sales for July.

The National Economic and Planning Association, after a three-month study of the possibilities of commerce with Latin-American countries, declared that "the United States stands to gain tremendously in Latin-American trade during the European war."

From the United States Department of Labor came a report showing a 6 per cent gain in wholesale commodity prices in the last three weeks, raising the commodity index to 79.3 per cent of the 1926 average, the highest level since the spring of 1938.

11 Ship Contracts Are Awarded by U. S. Commission

By the Associated Press

The Maritime Commission yesterday awarded contracts for the construction of 11 cargo vessels, bringing to 125 the number of ships it has ordered since it started to rehabilitate the merchant marine about two years ago.

Four of the 11 will be constructed by the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation of Birmingham, Ala., at its plant at Pascagoula, Miss., at a price of $2,550,000 each.

Four will be built by the Bethlehem Steel Co. at its Quincy, Mass., plant for $2,430,000 each. They will be acquired by American Export Lines which operates between the United States, North Atlantic, Mediterranean and Black Sea ports. The remaining three will be constructed by Bethlehem Steel Co. at its plant at Sparrows Point, Md., at a price of $2,140,000 each, and will be acquired by the Seas Shipping Co. (Robin Line) which operates from New York to South and East Africa.

Red Cross Work In Present War Outlined by Blair

Livingston L. Blair, assistant director of the American Junior Red Cross, yesterday pointed to Red Cross war relief activity as a practical demonstration that "democratic institutions can act and do act effectively." He addressed the Junior Board of Commerce luncheon at the Annapolis Hotel.

Blair described the war relief activities of the Red Cross, reporting that as an impartial and international agency the American Red Cross has offered its services to all nations involved in the European war. Only France and Poland have availed themselves of Red Cross aid for both those wounded in action and the civilian populations of areas under fire, he said.

The District chapter will begin today the first of several classes held for those desiring to teach volunteer sewing groups the preparation of surgical dressings.

'It's Terribly Hard for a Mother,' Says Marylander Whose Son Enlisted With British

By Edward Ryan.

"It's terribly hard for a mother to take."

With these words, Mrs. James G. Taylor, wife of a World War soldier, told yesterday how news had come that her oldest son, William, 34, had become the first American to enlist with the British naval air force for a new war.

Her voice slow and firmly restrained, Mrs. Taylor talked of her soldier son by telephone from her Annapolis (Md.) home, 30 miles away. She talked carefully, explained that she had called simply to obtain several copies of the newspaper in which the first report of her son's enlistment was carried.

"I was afraid if he got over there, it would happen," she said. Her son, a captain in the Marine Reserves and former United Airlines pilot, was in London working for a New York travel agency when the war started, she said.

His letters told her it was a "timid tourist" job, but to her this was the best of news. "I was so glad that he was out of the air," she said.

And then, in a letter dated September 12, came the grim message. Her son told her he had won "the dubious distinction of being the first American to enlist." He said he was leaving the next day, but didn't say where.

Her son comes from a soldier family. His father, Lieut. Col. James G. Taylor, retired, went over to the last war with the Thirtieth Division, which, with the Twenty-seventh Division, was attached to the Fourth British Army. He came back after a year and a half at the front.

Capt. "Bill" is named after his godfather, Maj. William Baker, retired. He was first named Erwin G. Taylor, but had that legally changed to William to conform to the nickname all his friends used.

Of Mrs. Taylor's two other sons, 21-year-old Timothy Gibson Taylor, is now preparing to take examinations for a commission in the Marine Corps in November. James G. Taylor, Jr., 30, is an author.

Capt. Taylor's service with the American armed forces goes back 15 years. After studying at New York University, he spent a year on active naval duty, serving aboard the aircraft carrier Lexington on its first trip through the Panama Canal. He later saw duty with marine posts, including Quantico.

Now his enlistment and appointment as sub-lieutenant has brought from his father a letter of encouragement. Col. Taylor thinks "Bill couldn't have joined a better outfit," than the British.

But to his mother, "it's terribly hard to take."

U-Boat Sinks British Vessel

Bergen, Norway, Sept. 22 (AP).—A submarine sank the British freighter Akenside today, 10 miles off the Norwegian coast in the North Sea.

Inhabitants of the Hisol Islands, watching through binoculars, witnessed the torpedoing of the 2,894-ton ship whose crew of 26 escaped in lifeboats and was rescued by a Norwegian ship.

The Akenside was en route from Lythe, England, to Bergen with a cargo of coal. The rescued sailors were quoted as saying the submarine crew offered them cigarettes after they took to their lifeboats

D. C. Guard To Add 552 Men to Rolls

Guns Will Be Put On Show at Recruiting Rally Monday

Immediate expansion of the District National Guard by 552 men was ordered yesterday as a part of the general expansion of American military strength being made under the limited emergency declared by President Roosevelt two weeks ago.

Secretary of War Woodring announced the allocation to States of the 40,791-man increase in Nationwide Guard strength and shortly thereafter local militia officials revealed plans for building up District regiments to their new authorized enrollment—a new peacetime high.

Guns to Be Demonstrated

A recruiting rally will be staged Monday night in Marion Park, Fifth and E streets southeast, in an atmosphere reminiscent of World War days. The 260th Coast Artillery, Washington's anti-aircraft defenders, will stage a demonstration of searchlights and guns, a guard band will play military airs and enlistment officers will be on hand to sign up recruits.

Cars will be available to transport candidates to the armory, where doctors will be kept on duty to examine men for enrollment.

A Friendly Outfit

Announcing the recruiting plans, Col. Charles A. Dravo, adjutant general of the District Guard, said:

"This is the time for people to get in an organization where in case of an emergency they will be with friends. If no emergency arises, they will be in one of the best clubs in the city."

Most of the increase allotted to the District goes to the anti-aircraft regiment. The 121st Engineers will be expanded by 70 men to a new strength of 552, Company A of the 372d Infantry will add 17 men, while the 260th will be enlarged from 870 to 1,235 men, nearly its peacetime limit.

When the new increment is enrolled, the District Guard will have a strength of 2,184. No additional officers have been authorized, it was said, as the men will be taken into existing units. Col. Walter W. Burns, 260th's commander, said that his regiment's searchlight battery will be expanded to 173 men, 3-inch gun batteries to 104, the .50 caliber machine gun battery to 111 and the .37 mm. machine gun batteries to 120 men. All now have a strength of 66.

Pope Worried Over Fate of Polish Church

Vatican Especially Concerned Over Part Occupied by Russia

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, Sept. 22.—Vatican City prelates expressed grave concern tonight over the future of the Polish Catholic Church, especially in that part of Poland occupied by Soviet Russia.

Pope Pius, who has received a comprehensive report on the situation from August Cardinal Hlond, Primate of Poland, who is now in Rome, was said to be giving the situation his closest personal attention.

Reports reaching the Vatican indicate that while churches and other religious buildings have suffered considerable damage, all Polish bishops with the exception of the primate have remained in their sees.

"Vexations" Are Feared

No word of religious molestations have been received, but "vexations of religious character" are feared from the Russians, one prelate said.

One reason why churchmen believe Catholicism may suffer both at the hands of the Soviets and the Nazis is that Polish Catholicism always has been closely united with Polish patriotism.

After previous partitions of Poland, both Russians and Prussians have attacked the Polish Church in an attempt to crush Polish nationalism. Churchmen said the Russians attempted to exterminate Roman Catholicism in Poland by suppressing monasteries and closing churches from 1773 to 1905 when a policy of tolerance finally was inaugurated.

"Kulturkampfs" Recalled

The church in that part of Poland annexed by Prussia suffered considerably in various "kulturkamps" with the confiscation of much property and the subordination of the clergy to Prussian temporal power, some prelates said.

Poland is regarded here as a stronghold of Catholicism. Of the country's approximately 35,000,000 people, about 65 per cent are Roman Catholics and 10 per cent Greek Uniat Catholics, who use the Greek rite, but recognize the Pope.

No, Not Warsaw—Washington!

The east wall collapsed while work was in progress on the site of a home to be built on an adjoining lot. The Lucas family wondered where they would spend the night.

Nazi Deserter Would Aid Britain

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 22. (AP).—A 25-year-old man who claimed he is a former Nazi storm trooper implored a Federal district judge today to permit him to join the Canadian or British armies rather than deport him to Germany where he said he faces death for desertion.

Frederick Wilhelm Arnold Eickhoff told Judge Frank Cooper he fled Germany to escape service in the Spanish war, going to Holland and thence in August, 1936 to Montreal. Last month, Eickhoff related, he fled to the United States because he feared he would be mistaken for a spy.

Holland Prepares To Defend Herself

Amsterdam, Holland, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—While Holland gave every indication today of a determination to preserve her neutrality, she was preparing on a big scale to defend herself if necessary.

Of her population of 8,000,000, she had mobilized 65,000 troops at a cost of 15,000,000 guilders ($8,001,000) and was keeping them on her frontiers at a cost of 2,000,000 guilders ($1,066,800) a day, representing an annual expenditure of 730,000,000 guilders ($389,382,000).

Gen. Drum Lauds American Soldier

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 22. (UP).—Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the first United States Army, said tonight that the "American soldier is superior to any he may meet in the field," but warned again that the nation is unprepared for war.

He told the New York National Guard Association that the "young Americans of today are imbued with the same spirit and patriotism as inspired the 'minute men' of 1775."

Italy Asks Peace to Save Balkans

peated with emphasis and adornment today. In additon, there is a new line which is intended to show "absurdity" of the conflict. This is that the Russian invasion has brought a new and decisive factor into play.

"Russians and Germans have found their terrain of collaboration," writes Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia, "just as they did after previous partitions of Poland." Therefore, to be logical a war of extermination will have to be waged not only against Hitlerism but against Stalinism.

Mediterranean Believed Safe

"To say with an air of great firmness that it is intended to reconstruct Poland as it was before," continues Il Duce's newspaper, "is simply absurd and immeasurably grotesque. Since the democracies condemn Germany as guilty of aggression, it follows that Russia is also to be condemned for the same line. Neither one is an aggressor or both are."

The conclusion which the good sense of the people must reach is that if war is not to be made against Russia then there is no right to make war against Germany and that there has already been one useless war and it would be inhuman and diabolical to impose a second useless war on Europe.

An interesting angle of comment on the Italo-Greek decision to withdraw respective troops from the Greco-Albanian frontier is that now war has been excluded from the Mediterranean. From the trade point of view, Italy's prime consideration is to keep the Mediterranean open, otherwise her great mercantile structure would collapse.

Needs Raw Materials

Details are obviously taboo, but one can say that commercial relations between Italy and England and France are being developed in considerable proportions. Italy has a legal right to do this, axis or no axis.

Moreover, Italy has need of raw materials which she cannot now get from Germany or Russia which must keep what they have. Above all, Italy has need of cash and it is London and Paris, not Berlin, which can pay for purchases in gold.

In that respect, Italian businessmen feel exactly as American men do. The newspapers do not say so in their accounts of Roosevelt's speech yesterday, but there should at least be official sympathy for the cash-and-carry idea. Only the Osservatore Romano, incidentally, gives the full text of Roosevelt's speech and it takes up nearly four columns of its front page to do so.

Hungarians in Poland

Rome, Sept 22.—Hungarian troops yesterday crossed the Polish frontier and occupied Sianki, a small town on the border of Carpatho-Ukraine, according to a dispatch from Ungvar by the Giornale D'Italia's special correspondent. Episodes of extreme violence have taken place in Sianki which "have rendered necessary the intervention of Hungarian troops," writes the correspondent. The occupation, he adds, is of "a temporary character."

The Good Neighbor

There is one profoundly inspiring bit of news from Europe. It comes neither from Berlin nor Paris, nor London nor Warsaw, but from neutral Hungary, where the compassionate welcome accorded the Polish refugees proves that the time to despair of human nature is certainly not yet.

Obviously, these refugees, already numbering tens of thousands, have presented a formidable problem to the Hungarian nation which has more than enough problems of its own. The presence of all these wretched Poles means for Hungary not merely a delicate political complication but also a tremendous expense and a not inconsiderable danger of epidemic.

Yet all these considerations of national self-interest seem to have been forgotten in a great national outburst of pity. Hungarians from the highest to the lowest appear to be doing everything humanly possible to mitigate the miseries of their unbidden guests. The great ladies of the land, headed by Mme. Horthy, wife of the regent, have been working feverishly to establish an effective system of refugee relief.

The Hungarian hospitals have opened their doors to the sick and wounded. One reads of Hungarian soldiers stammering words of consolation and offering food and tobacco to the haggard, despairing Polish soldiers; of the supplies of food and warm clothing that are being rushed to the frontier for distribution, of peasants leading the refugee children directly into their homes.

In the midst of nations organized for death and destruction, Hungary presents the strange spectacle of a nation organizing for a magnificent and heroic work of mercy.

Uses Of Ingenuity

Wars and rumors of war have not dampened the industry or ingenuity of our gadget devisers, judging from the Patent Office report of 743 patents granted in one week this month.

These gadgets, considered individually, are of trifling importance or utility (an inflatable umbrella opened by a pump handle; an automatic egg breaker; a scoring device for bridge players in the form of a knob dial; an automatic fish-scaling machine, etc.).

But taken together, they indicate that while man on the one hand looks with detached concern at the blotting out of whole cities, on the other hand his search for ways and means of increasing his daily creature comforts is never far from his heart or mind. Anything that will eliminate an inch of space, conserve a second of time or ounce of energy, excites his interest.

If all this ingenuity and labor went into practical efforts at improving good will among men, the world would be a pleasanter and safer place to live in. In any event, we would be less apt to destroy in brief spasms of ill will what centuries of skill and planning have slowly built.

The comforts of civilization do not seem to add up to a happy total. Many "primitive" or "savage" tribes are still ahead of us here.

Meeting The Aggressor

Don't envy the person who boasts he has never had a sick day in his life. He is apt to go faster than the person who has had a fair amount of "fun in bed."

Get sick—and stay well. That's no best seller slogan or shallow paradox but a truth demonstrated time and again by science. The whole phenomenon of active immunity derives largely from the theory and practice of inoculating the patient with determined quantities of the vaccine or toxin of a disease against the menace or ravages of which he is to be protected. That serves to build up his resistance. Nature, aided by science, constructs a Maginot line in the body.

Medical authorities for a long time refused to put any faith in immunity until in 1881 Pasteur performed one of his historic experiments. Anthrax was killing off sheep in France. Pasteur injected into 25 of them, all healthy, a vaccine of anthrax weakened by heat. The sheep developed a slight indisposition and got well again. Three weeks later Pasteur injected into the same sheep virulent anthrax bacteria, a dose that is generally fatal. All 25 survived. The sheep were immune. But 25 unvaccinated sheep, given the same dose, perished.

Soon after, the first test on a human body was made. A boy bitten by a mad dog, and whose life was despaired of, was injected with a weakened virus of rabies. The boy's life was saved. Other cases, treated similarly, showed equally successful results.

Today anti-toxins, serums and vaccines are given as preventives or cures for smallpox, typhoid fever, diphtheria, and other communicable diseases. Millions of lives are thus saved.

The best way to withstand an enemy is to fight him with his own weapons. That is as true of germ diseases as of aggressor nations.

Shifting Trade Trends

One inevitable effect of the war in Europe will be to draw the nations of the Western Hemisphere closer together. Representatives of all the American governments have assembled in Panama City for the opening today of a conference on measures to safeguard peace on this side of the Atlantic and to minimize the economic disturbances resulting from the war. Europe's misfortune may substantially strengthen the ties underlying the Monroe Doctrine.

In his address on the occasion of Pan American day at the New York World's Fair, Secretary Hull properly emphasized the common interest of American nations in facing this conflict. Twelve American republics became involved in the World War. Presumably all of the 21 republics occupying the two American continents are now eager to remain neutral. Their chance of doing so will be greatly strengthened if they can agree upon mutually helpful means of promoting their own welfare.

The Panama gathering is an outgrowth of the Eighth International Conference of American States at Lima last year. At that time the American republics proclaimed their solidarity, reasserted their adherence to the principles of international law and agreed to consult among themselves in the event of danger to peace in this hemisphere. Events have proved the wisdom of that action. Complex problems affecting the American states in general as a result of the war can now be discussed in a routine way.

While these developments are taking place, trade between the United States and Latin America is already undergoing important shifts. Increased buying of our products to take the place of supplies no longer available in Europe is reported. A number of American flagships are being diverted from European trade lanes and will soon be serving Latin-American ports. The Americas again have a real opportunity to extend their commerce to mutual advantage.

A current report by the National Economic and Social Planning Association points out that "the United States stands to gain tremendously in Latin-American trade during the European war." The major question is whether this closer economic relationship between the American republics is to be of a temporary or lasting character. Trade diverted in wartime may readily resume its former channels unless new interests and advantages are created. So positive steps will have to be taken if the American republics are to keep a larger volume of their commerce within this hemisphere, where the danger of disruption through war is greatly minimized.

Obviously the mistake of extending loans to Latin America for expansion of its raw material output during the World War should not be repeated. The N. E. S. P. A. believes that some credits may be desirable, but that these should be used largely for the development of industries in Latin America or for "those few raw materials which the United States is prepared to import." That is a sensible view. In the long run greater industrial development of Latin America would doubtless increase the purchasing power of the people and create a larger demand for export specialties from this country. The chief weakness of this suggestion is the uncertainty as to the status of foreign industrial investments in some Latin-American countries since Mexico adopted a policy of virtually confiscating property belonging to American citizens.

In taking advantage of the new trade opportunities we should clearly recognize that gains are not likely to be permanent unless we increase our buying from Latin-American countries as well as our selling to them. Because of exchange difficulties most of our customers to the south are under pressure to buy in countries where their goods can be sold. That raises an especially difficult problem because some of their raw materials are highly competitive with the products of our farms. Yet the advantages of closer economic relations with Latin America are sufficient to warrant a careful reexamination of existing barriers.

Trade between the United States and Latin America as a whole is fairly well balanced at present. That fact should facilitate adjustment to the new conditions resulting from the war. There can be little doubt that a larger exchange of goods can be made mutually profitable without jeopardizing domestic interests. But this will require a genuinely cooperative attitude in which the reported plans of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to subsidize wheat exports to Central and South America have no place.

A Split In The NLRB

A very important issue has arisen in the case of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. It has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to recognize the Federation of Flat Glass Workers, a C. I. O. union, as the sole bargaining agency for the glass workers in all six of its plants. There is no question as to the right of the union to represent the employes of five of these plants. The dispute revolves about the sixth plant, at Crystal City, Mo. The employes there are not affiliated with the federation, and were specifically excluded from the agreement which the company and the federation concluded in 1937.

The question, therefore, is whether the NLRB has the right to extend a contract covering five plants to the employes of a sixth who have not voted for representation by the contracting union. It is this issue which has split the board. Two of its three members maintain that the NLRB "in its determination of the appropriate bargaining unit is not necessarily bound, and in many instances should not adhere, to a unit fixed through some previous agreement between private parties." They note that previous contracts are "an important factor in determining the appropriate bargaining unit." Yet they believe that the board would "be abandoning its plain functions . . . if it refused to consider all the factors in a case and relied solely for its determination of the bargaining unit upon prior collective agreements."

The majority then enumerates various factors which, in its opinion, should be taken into account in determining what bargaining unit is best suited to give all employes the full benefit of their right of self-organization and collective bargaining. Starting from this viewpoint, they present strong arguments in favor of extending the union contract to all plants of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.

They point out, for instance, that wages, hours, working conditions and manufacturing processes vary but little from plant to plant, and that, in consequence, the interests of the employes of the various plants are interwoven. A lack of common grouping promotes disharmony and gives unjustified advantages to one set of employes not enjoyed by another. Moreover, they take into account the fact that the company has in the past interfered with efforts to establish a wider basis for bargaining by allegedly isolating the Crystal City plant and setting up a company-dominated union.

These are strong arguments, but they are ignored by Commissioner Leiserson in registering an equally strong dissent. Dr. Leiserson, former chairman of the National Mediation Board, has had long experience as a labor mediator. Hence his objections are worthy of serious consideration.

"The case here," he says, "is in the nature of a friendly suit to determine whether the law permits the certification of the union for the Crystal City plant without an election. The board was in error, in my judgment," he adds, "when it merged into a single bargaining unit the Crystal City employes with the employes in the five plants under contract with the federation and, without a vote, certified the federation as the exclusive representative of the employes in all the plants." Dr. Leiserson, furthermore, challenges the majority argument that the board, under its authority to determine bargaining units, may alter the terms of a binding contract to cover a plant expressly excluded by the parties to that agreement.

There the matter stands. The board has added to the confusion of employer and employe groups affected by its rulings. The differences of opinion among its members are evidently due to different conceptions of the scope of its discretionary powers and divergent views about the basic philosophy of the act.

Lindbergh Versus Thompson

"Worse Threat"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are wondering if Marshal Goering would not like to bestow another Nazi decoration on Col. Lindbergh after his talk over the radio. Col. Lindbergh used his prestige and the admiration a Nation once had for him to influence his fellow countrymen with the very subtle propaganda he questions when he urges that our "self-interest" should be so all powerful that we should eliminate those standards and values and Christian principles for which America has ever stood.

Evidently Col. Lindbergh's admiration for the "German genius for science and organization" has blinded his vision as to the real issues at stake—that there is a worse threat than "a Genghis Khan or a Xerxes marching." It is the threat of an ideology—a Nazi-Communism—dominating the world which seeks to destroy all Christian principles and moral obligations of individual and nation.

Does not Col. Lindbergh realize that in asking us to cut out these Christian principles of pity and sympathy and loyalty that we are furthering the growth of Nazism—a creed that teaches the little children of the Reich to betray friend, neighbor and even mother and father if it furthers the state and growth of Nazism? What worse fate could come to our children of America than that such principles and such a force should rule their world in the future because the parents of today put "self-interest" above all else? ELIZABETH WILLSON.

Pained

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am deeply pained to see that the destructive effects of the European war are already being visited upon this country, and that one of those effects is the attack upon the character and loyalty of Charles A. Lindbergh.

I listened intently to Col. Lindbergh's address and have read and reread it since reading Miss Thompson's article. I find nothing in it to justify suspicion of his loyalty or doubt of his sincere desire to benefit this country. I have no doubt that he speaks from a broader knowledge and a deeper consideration than inspires most of the discussion of the present situation.

He does not refer to the immediate question of the retention or repeal of the arms embargo, but solemnly warns the country of the probable effects of our participation in the present European war. In this he merely supplements the warnings of many of our leading men.

His statement may even be interpreted as an expression of opinion that if this country does not enter the war with its full force, suffering all of the attendant horrors, the democracies of Europe may be defeated. He is not alone in that opinion. He merely faces the fact at the proper time. There is no doubt that a coalition of Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan, if effected, will form a most formidable combination of force. It now seems that no distinctions between Nazis, Fascists, or Communists are to stand in the way of such a combination. They will unite at least until the common prey is pulled down.

Practically no one in this country wishes it to enter the present war. But if that war should result in the defeat of democracy in Europe, our people would find no comfort in the reflection that they had contributed to the defeat by a policy of so-called neutrality that gave great aid and comfort to the victors.

Assuming the honesty and sincerity of Col. Lindbergh and his fellow-isolationists, it does not follow that the policy they advocate is the one that this country, as a member of the World's group of governments, should adopt. The fact that our participation in the first World War and its attempted settlements has not had the effects hoped for is not conclusive evidence that the isolationist doctrine will be sound for all time.

It was hoped and designed that world justice would be secured through the League of Nations, but the failure of the league to effect its purpose should not spell the doom of world peace. An important factor in that failure was the refusal to join the League by the Nation that had been most instrumental in its creation. Let us continue to believe in democracy as set up in our Constitution.

"Not Go Unchallenged"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not that Col. Lindbergh's Americanism or humanity needs defense, but because attacks by their own terms as unwarranted and unfair as the so-called Lindbergh "analysis" by Dorothy Thompson in The Post of September 20 should not go unchallenged, the following is submitted:

Miss Thompson says: "When Col. Lindbergh left this country in 1935 he did not believe that the United States or its institutions were the hope of the world." This is speculative and unwarranted. By what divination does Miss Thompson know what he believed or did not believe?

Further: "In April, 1933, still pursuing his intention to remain abroad, he bought the French island of Illiec." Miss Thompson has no right to impute to Col. Lindbergh the intention to remain or not to remain abroad. Still further: "It was announced that he intended to rent an apartment in Berlin and settle down there." Announced by whom? Not by Col. Lindbergh or anyone with authority, else it would have been so stated.

Miss Thompson usually does not discredit herself so soon, but one paragraph begins, "Col. Lindbergh's inclination toward Fascism is well known to his friends," and ends, "He is completely indifferent to political philosophy." Later she says: "He played a considerable role in European political affairs and exercised a certain influence over European policies." Either Col. Lindbergh is not indifferent to political philosophy, or the other statements, as of the role he played, and their effect, are irrelevant.

Mark Twain characterized being "pilloried in print" as the keenest of all human suffering. Against it there is no defense. It is this which Col. Lindbergh suffers at the hands of Miss Thompson.

Few fair-minded persons hold the Ickes attitude toward columnists generally, but utterances such as here discussed go far toward explaining, if not justifying, that attitude. EDWARD F. McKAY.

Forces

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Dorothy Thompson takes Senator Borah and Charles Lindbergh to task for their lack of economic understanding or their bias, it is to laugh. She hasn't now, nor has she ever had, a proper understanding of economics herself, or she would know that what is going on in the world is the result of implacable forces growing out of the needs of the masses. Without the masses' support, no Hitler, no Napoleon, no Cromwell could endure.

The consequent warfare in Europe, now as in the past, is a struggle for the control and profits of trade routes. As the butler in "Cavalcade" put it, "We have to fight now and then just to prove we still are top dog."

If we spend our energies in booing the possible new champ from the sidelines, and maybe putting horseshoes in his opponent's gloves, we'll deserve just what that sort of gallery crowd is entitled to, namely, the bum's rush.

Disgust

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I record my disgust with Dorothy Thompson's treatment of Col. Lindbergh's recent radio address. The unfair tactics which she employed to discredit both his personality and his opinions are as questionable as her reasons for doing so. I do not deny that her right to disagree with his opinions is as well established by American practice as—and has she forgotten this?—his right is to express them, but the right to do so with the nasty viciousness which she displayed is certainly not her prerogative.

There must be thousands of Americans who feel as Col. Lindbergh did, who heartily indorse his logic and who consider their points of view as calculated to further the best interests of this country in such a time of peril for its institutions as it has been called upon to face only once before in its history. In the light of Miss Thompson's suggestion that Lindbergh may be influenced by Fascist tendencies it becomes necessary to inquire into those influences which guide her own opinions. The apparent answer is that she has fallen so completely under the spell of British propaganda that she is wholly incapable of expressing an impartial opinion representative of the opinion of Americans.

Our own principles are bound to undergo drastic change, if this war should spread, no matter what its outcome. It must be evident even to Miss Thompson that we can retain more of our ideals for a longer period if we look to the tremendous internal problems which face us rather than to those problems other nations have created for themselves. We still have starvation, poverty, exploitation, debt, the unemployed. War might settle some of these things temporarily, but what of the future? America has its tomorrows. Let Americans preserve for them our national dignity and, above all else, our individual freedom. WILLIAM M. HAUSSMAN.
Arlington, Va., Sept. 20.

"Crust"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have crust to criticize Col. Lindbergh, Miss Thompson. Lindbergh is not a hypocrite; his past performances prove he has intelligence, honesty, a conscious belief in what he says; he may be wrong, but he has honest opinions worthy of consideration.

I'll put Col. Lindbergh's veracity above the average American. You can smear him, but his soul will be spotless for evermore.

S. B. STEARNS.

More And Less

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How you expect intelligent readers to swallow stuff written by Dorothy Thompson is one on me. A little less Miss Thompson and more Col. Lindbergh and we'd be a lot better off.

Don't care if you publish this or not, for I'm not going to read The Post as long as it publishes articles that aren't fair.

HAROLD GARRISTON.

Faith

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I suggest in these few months left to us before the war fever mounts to frantic intensity in this country that we place our faith in Col. Lindbergh rather than Dorothy Thompson. Surely Lindbergh's voice is the cool, considered judgment as opposed to the emotional Dorothy Thompson's sinister propaganda. Let us deafen our ears to it. Lindbergh for me. ROBERT W.

The Post Impressionist

Rearing Rosalie

WILMA HAS DEFINITE ideas on raising children. She views the child's psyche with reverence. She pictures it somewhat as a sheet of blotting paper of a pure white texture, absorbing all experiences which come its way, for good or ill.

"I intend to use reason alone to guide my Rosalie," Wilma says. "Corporal punishment is merely a device by which the parent asserts his ego over the child's; it stores up resentments and inhibitions in the child."

When Rosalie became so far developed as to skew up her little mouth and wiggle her tongue in order to enunciate the word "wawa," Wilma began to apply her reasoning technique. The effects were not immediately apparent; not, at least, until Rosalie's vocabulary improved.

Then Wilma began to discover that Rosalie, too, had no mean reasoning prowess; and, further, that Rosalie was rarely, if ever, satisfied with her mother's logic, but preferred her own.

"Don't twist the dials on the radio so hard, dear," Wilma would say.

"Why?"

"Because you'll break them off, dear."

"Well—I wanna break them off."

"But, dear!" Wilma would allow a little shock to creep into her voice, just enough to let Rosalie know how mamma felt about twisting dials off radios. "Then the radio won't play any more."

"Don't believe it." And Rosalie would return to her dial twisting, confident of the superiority of her case.

In situations like this, Rosalie may have escaped storing up inhibitions, but not Wilma.

By the time Rosalie was 3, her logic had clashed with Wilma's on innumerable occasions and had always emerged superior. By this time there was little doubt of its ascendancy. Rosalie ruled ruthlessly, dispenser of the better thinking.

Maids had come and gone, until Wilma finally employed a colored woman, just under middle age, who could cook, launder, darn socks, iron, dust and sweep under the bed with equal facility. Fast, unobtrusive, Virginia kept the wheels of the household in motion. If Wilma had nightmares these days they were on the subject of a Virginia-less household.

Rosalie had always been rather indifferent toward maids. Virginia, however, stayed on and on. She began to arouse Rosalie's proud sovereignty. As Virginia became more and more a part of the family, Rosalie recognized that her dictatorship required assertion.

Wilma went shopping one day, secure in the knowledge that her household was in capable hands. She returned to find Virginia standing in the hallway, her coat on and a mournful look on her features.

"Why, Virginia! Is anything the matter?" asked Wilma, in alarm.

"Miss Rosie, she done fired me," said Virginia, "she say for me to stay in the hallway until you all come back to pay me."

"Why, Virginia, you shouldn't pay any attention to Rosalie! Why, she's only 6 years old!"

"I know, Miss Wilma, but she's powerful smart."

Wilma took Virginia inside and called Rosalie.

"Now, Rosalie," she said, "tell Virginia that you were only joking."

Rosalie looked over her mother and Virginia coolly.

"Mother, I guess you'd better look for another girl," she said. "I've just fired Virginia."

Wilma had a difficult job on her hands. She took Rosalie aside and talked swiftly in low tones. Rosalie finally took a proffered nickel and went out to get an ice cream cone, and Virginia stayed.

Then came the afternoon when Wilma's husband asked his office staff to the house for cocktails.

Wilma and Virginia bustled around the kitchen. About 5:30 the guests began to arrive. Each time the bell rang, Rosalie, in her little white party dress, ran to the door, getting there just ahead of Virginia, whom she would ignore. She would fling the door open and greet each guest with a courtly, "Good afternoon; Won't you come in?"

Between arrivals she put the guests at their ease, amusing them with anecdotes of her school life.

She was left-handed, it seemed. The teacher was experiencing great difficulty in teaching her to write with her right hand. Not that she cared with which hand she wrote, she loftily asserted. Writing with either hand was "such a nuisance," but she could never read back what she inscribed with her right, whereas with her left hand she could write so that it was at least partly legible.

School was boring, she asserted, but she had nothing better to do, except to watch Virginia to see that she did her job right.

At this point she saw Virginia emerge from the kitchen with a tray of cocktails. Rosalie bounced up to head her off, and demanded the tray. She held it very carefully, spilled a little, and served the ladies first. Then she returned to the kitchen for another trayful.

The guests kept coming, with Virginia answering the door; Rosalie was busy serving the drinks.

Soon the guests began to notice something a little queer about Rosalie's demeanor. She broke into little gurgles as she tripped about the room serving the cocktails.

Fortunately, the tray was almost empty when she finally slipped over, Wilma, frantic and apologetic, carried her to the bedroom, where Rosalie lay on the bed and giggled.

"The cocktails are all right, mother," she announced, between giggles, "I tasted them all in the hallway to make sure Virginia was making them right."

How Wilma's reasoning has progressed to date, I do not know.

Fair Enough

Sympathy Alienated

THE TIME WAS, not very long ago, when the presence of pickets around a place of business was accepted by the public as a sign that the employes were having a dispute with the boss. The original purpose of picketing was to dissuade nonstrikers or strike-breakers from entering the premises. Theoretically, the pickets were to confine themselves to nonviolent appeals, but local police and professional sluggers entered the situation and picketing for a time was roughly synonymous with rioting.

Labor unions claimed that the fights were started by the police and the company thugs, and the public apparently accepted this version, because, for a long time, the picket lines enjoyed the sympathy and respect of the bystander. A union man held it to be a great sin to cross a picket line, and among those who were not employed in organized trades there was a disposition to help union men by avoiding struck stores and wares. The courts and, through the election of mayors sympathetic with organized labor, the police changed their old attitude and became neutral at worst and generally a little partial to the strikers.

Much Of Public's Sympathy Alienated

NOWADAYS, however, with unions striking against other unions in certain cases, union men do cross picket lines, and this example and many known abuses of the weapon of picketing have alienated much of the sympathy of the public. Pickets have been seen parading about premises in which the employes were members of rival unions. The proprietor of a moving picture theater in New York reports that pickets importuned his patrons not to take the bread out of the mouths of their children by patronizing unfair houses, although the theater was manned by union help from front to back, with the exception of the manager, who was a partner. The union demanded the right to select the manager, and the dispute was solved when the owner-manager joined the union, which meant that he had to pay tribute for the right to manage his own business.

In San Francisco a few years ago pickets were seen picketing pickets, which is to say that one union declared the store unfair to labor and the other put men right on the heels of these pickets to deny the charge. Parades have been held in front of business houses which were having no union trouble with their own employes because these firms had commercial dealings with other firms which were struck. Such commercial dealings are usually covered by legal contracts, and a picketed house in no way concerned in the original dispute might be penalized in court for breach of contract if it were to cancel dealings with a struck firm merely to appease a union. But, for refusing to make itself judge of the dispute and for refusing to violate its contracts, it must submit to a form of organized slander frankly intended to drive away customers.

Judges Hesitate To Enjoin Pickets

THERE SEEMS to be no redress for a firm picketed under such circumstances. The victims must take their losses, and if the decline of business due to picketing makes it necessary to lay off employes, even union men, that is their hard luck. Judges, being politicians, hesitate to enjoin unions from secondary picketing, and a judge who does enjoin it is himself declared to be an enemy of labor and tool of the bosses and, in effect, picketed.

Cases are not uncommon in which pickets appear before business premises who never were employed there, but carry union signs flatly declaring the employer to be unfair, with no explanation of the issue. The employer's story is, however, that his employes have refused to join a union and that he refuses to sign a closed shop agreement which would permit the union to throw them out and put in its own people. He is having no trouble with his own help and, far from it, has shown some courage in protecting them, but the public reads placards denouncing him as an enemy of labor.

Minority In Union Can Order Strike

THE TECHNICAL, parliamentary right of minorities to call strikes and establish picket lines supported by pickets assigned from headquarters is subject to abuse, but, on the other hand, is no longer overlooked by majorities. If a union can sign 16 members of a department having 30 employes, that union can call a strike by a majority vote of the members present at strike meeting, which means that if a dozen men attend the meeting and seven vote to strike, those seven can throw a picket line around a plant employing several hundred, with full rights to insult, slander and, subject to certain risks, to assault nonstrikers going through the line.

As a result of many abuses of the picketing privilege, the picket line has lost much of its prestige with the public and its influence in organized labor.

Today And Tomorrow

Heart of the Question: Repeal or Retention Of Arms Embargo

THE HEART of the question which Congress is now going to debate is whether the repeal or the retention of the embargo on arms is the more likely to lead the United States into the war. It is evident that it is impossible for the advocates of either policy to prove their case conclusively. None of us can do more than to estimate the long-range consequences in a situation where even the existing facts are obscure and the future is hidden.

Anyone, therefore, who tells the people that he knows his policy will work, and that he possesses the sure and certain formula, is either not clear-headed or he is lacking in candor. The best that Congress can hope to do now is to adopt that policy which, on a cool estimate of the probabilities as we know them today, seems the least likely to have consequences which will put us in a difficult and dangerous position later on. Having made the best choice possible, the only safe course is to stand united, vigilant and prepared against the unforeseeable developments and emergencies for the duration of the war and of the settlement which follows it.

Damned If We Do, Also If We Don't

THIS, I SUBMIT, is the test by which the issue should be examined: Whether the one course or the other, that is, repeal or retention, will tend to give this country greater or less freedom in the future; whether repeal or retention is the less likely to confront us with an ugly dilemma from which there is no safe and satisfactory escape. For we must remember that Congress is legislating about the future; and if that legislation is wise, it will be designed to prevent, so far as human foresight can prevent it arising, a situation in which we are damned if we do and damned if we don't.

Now, it will be admitted by all, I imagine, that the shorter the war the less likely we are to be drawn into it, and that the longer the war lasts the more desperate it will become and the more extensive. That being the case, we must ask ourselves whether repeal or retention is the more likely to shorten the war and limit its scope. Advocates of retention, as, for example, Senator Borah, take the view, it would seem, that if the Allies are unable to buy arms in this country they will soon be willing or they will soon be compelled to give up the struggle and make terms with Hitler. This is, perhaps, conceivable. It may be that they would regard the retention of the embargo as such a serious blow that they would be too utterly discouraged to go on fighting. In that event, Senator Borah's expectations would be fulfilled—this war would be shortened by the retirement and defeat of the western democracies.

Retention Seen As Prolonging War

BUT, LEAVING OUT of consideration any question of whether an Allied defeat is desirable, thinking only about whether retention of the embargo might shorten the war, it can be argued that the embargo will have precisely the opposite result. If the British and the French continue to believe that they cannot make peace with Hitler, then the embargo will almost certainly lengthen the war. For it would mean that the Allies would have to stand on the defensive until they had constructed in Canada and elsewhere the aircraft and arms factories that are closed to them here. They can do it, but it will take time to construct and organize the factories to make finished products with the tools, the raw materials, and semi-finished products, they import from the United States.

So Senator Borah is probably mistaken in thinking that the embargo will shorten the war. Indeed, it is so highly probable that we may regard it as virtually certain that the embargo will make the war much longer, much more murderous, much more exhausting, and much more destructive of human life and of the industrial organization of the western world. In a long war it will be harder to stay neutral. It will be harder to protect our interests and our rights, it will be harder to make a good peace. It will be harder to achieve a good reconstruction.

The advocates of retention argue that in any event, whether the war be long or short, the embargo will accomplish two things: It will not subject us to the hostility of the Nazi government, and it will protect us against having a vested interest in the Allied cause.

War Trade Likely Despite Embargo

BOTH ARGUMENTS rest on the assumption that the embargo will prevent American producers from making a substantial and, indeed, a vital contribution to the Allied cause. This is not the case. Even with the embargo on arms, this country will develop a great war trade in any long war. This war trade will develop because it is vital to the Allies; therefore, it will not be pleasing to their enemies. And since the war trade will create employment and profits, the embargo will not obviate whatever danger there may be in the creation of a vested interest in the Allied cause. That danger will have to be regulated not by an embargo on a few products but by taxation applied to excess profits.

That the embargo on arms will not prevent the expansion of war industry is shown conclusively by the report of the Nye committee (No. 944, part VI, page 66). The report says that in 1914-17 "the war-time expansion of trade touched all industries," and it goes on to cite figures covering commodities that would not be affected by the embargo; in the fiscal years 1915-17 as compared with 1911-13 the expansion of exports was as follows: "Wheat and flour from 110,000,000 to 700,000,000; semi-fabricated steel from 14,000,000 to 182,000,000; sugar from less than 4,000,000 to 130,000,000; horses from 11,000,000 to 194,000,000; dressed meat from 138,000,000 to 470,000,000."

Character Of War Exports To Change

I DO NOT FIND exact figures showing just what proportion of the total American exports were in commodities covered by the embargo. But Gen. Johnson and others have stated, and they cannot be far wrong, that the proportion was not more than 15 per cent. If we assume that the effect of the embargo will be to increase the export of tools, machines, and semifinished munitions for completion abroad, then we shall be safe in supposing that the effect of the embargo will be to change somewhat the character of war exports but not the eventual amount.

Thus we shall have a war industry anyway. The munitions manufacturers will merely be producing semifinished rather than wholly finished arms and ammunition, and there will be the farmers and the producers of raw materials and all kinds of other industries who will again be furnishing the war exports. The embargo touches too few commodities to prevent what Senator Borah and Senator Nye wish to prevent. It merely lengthens the period in which the war industry would operate by the time needed to organize abroad the plants which pass semifinished goods through the final stages of manufacture.

It may be argued perhaps that the Allies will not have the money to buy large exports from us and to enlarge their own plants for the finishing phase of the manufacture of arms, but this is a miscalculation. Not only are their financial resources much greater than they were 25 years ago but their ability to mobilize the financial resources of their great empires is altogether more highly developed. The financial direction of the other war was in the hands of orthodox bankers acting on nineteenth-century principles. The financial direction of this war will be carried on by men who have learned from Germany how to procure financial resources that an old-fashioned financier had no notion of how to get at.

Allies Don't Need Our Financial Aid

WITHOUT LOANS from us, the Allies will find ways of financing the war, and we may take it as certain that, whether we sell arms, or the tools, machines and semifinished products to make arms, there will be a large war industry in America.

What, then, becomes of the argument that the embargo will protect us against the resentment of Germany? Obviously, if Congress votes to retain the embargo there will be an immediate rejoicing and many expressions of gratitude in Berlin. But how long is this mood likely to last when it appears that the United States is supplying raw materials, tools and semifinished products for the new arsenals in Canada and for the enlarged arsenals in Great Britain, in France and throughout their empires? Surely it must be evident that with Germany blockaded and with the Allies able to draw vital supplies from this country the Germans will do what they can and what they dare to do in order to stop the flow of these vital supplies.

The surest protection we can devise by statute against that is to keep American ships out of the European war trade and to provide that the title to goods going to belligerents shall pass out of American hands before the goods cross our frontiers and leave our harbors. Beyond that, the surest guarantee we can have against reprisals is to be too strong to be intimidated or injured with impunity.

The Case Against Embargo Retention

WE MAY SAY then that retention of the embargo will almost certainly lengthen the war, that, second, there is no reason for believing that it can insure us against the displeasure of the Nazis, and, third, that it cannot prevent the expansion of war exports. The net effect, in so far as one can now imagine it, is to increase the risks of a long war without diminishing the risks that the embargo is expressly designed to eliminate.

On the other hand, the embargo does create a risk that must not be overlooked. Since it will not only lengthen the war but will place the Allies at a serious disadvantage for a large part of the war, that is until they have constructed more arms plants, it is possible they may be dealt a very serious, perhaps even a fatal, blow. No candid man can doubt that the specter of the defeat of the democracies, of the destruction of British sea power and the arrival of the Nazi-Soviet power in the Atlantic, would have a profound effect on the sentiments of the American people and upon their sense of security. There is no war party in this country today. But such a catastrophe would produce either a war party or, as the only alternative, an insistence upon arming this Nation on a scale beyond anything we now contemplate.

The effect of repeal will certainly be to make it much less probable that this hideous dilemma will arise. The effect of retaining the embargo will be to make the dilemma more probable. By repealing the embargo we make it more likely that our situation as it is today will not be radically altered, that the war will remain not only on the other side of the Atlantic but on the other side of the Allied defenses. With this barrier between ourselves and the war we are able to feel secure and remain neutral.

But if we retain the embargo, and then for lack of immediate weapons, the barrier that now keeps the war at a reasonably safe distance is broken down, it may require more than the sale of arms to establish a new barrier behind which we can feel secure.

strength of conscience, of reason, of the very instinct of self-preservation to return—before it is too late—to the tried and proven highway of those basic principles of international relations which, for the moment, continue to function fully only in our hemisphere and in a constantly diminishing area elsewhere.

Cuts Visit Short

"In the New World we have found that acceptance of these fundamental principles has made for progress and peace. To these same principles all nations can adhere, whenever they choose, and so, together with us, attain once more the blessing of an ordered and law-governed world. Meanwhile, in these hours of tragic trial, it is our duty to ourselves to keep these principles alive in our own midst and to make intensive and unceasing effort toward bringing about adherence to them throughout the world."

Hull cut short his visit to the World's Fair after making a long distance telephone call following his speech.

Instead of remaining until mid-evening as anticipated, he left at 4:45 p. m. (E. D. T.), in a police-escorted automobile presumably for Pennsylvania Station. A special train was said to have been awaiting him.

Panama Conference Today

Panama City, Panama, Sept. 22 (AP).—Possible steps to safeguard shipping between North and South American countries dominated conversations tonight among delegates to the neutrality conference of American republics.

Turning their attention to events abroad, the Paraguayan delegation said American nations "should unite in claiming the greatest respect from belligerents for legal commerce."

They urged that "all means within reach" be taken to prevent the operation of belligerents in American waters.

"To this effect the American nations should unite in a determination of a line of action to make their claims effective," the delegation stated.

The conference opens tomorrow.

Some delegates asserted the realization of the need for a continental defense might result in agreements for a coastal patrol, extending accords undertaken by Argentina and Uruguay.

President's Speech Praised

Foreign Minister Narciso Garay, of Panama, was named provisional president of the meeting. Delegates will map specific proposals for the conference in mid-week sessions and open plenary conferences will get under way Monday.

Diplomats here for the conference expressed approval today of President Roosevelt's declaration to Congress of the need to keep a Western world citadel in which civilization may be kept alive.

Delegates, alarmed at European developments, including the assassination of the Rumanian premier, stressed the need for co-ordination of protective measures.

Cordero Reyes, Nicaraguan foreign minister, declared the neutrality of the American nations was intimately related with the peace and safety of all American peoples.

He said that it was evident that co-ordination of conduct will tend to protect the neutrality and tranquility of the peoples of the western hemisphere and protect and develop intra-American commerce.

The President Likes Drama

By Mark Sullivan

U-Boat Incident

THESE ARE NOTES made in Washington September 21-22, 1939. They are of some present interest, and, I suspect, may have a faint interest a year from now, or five or ten—whenever the confused events of today have arranged themselves into the pattern of facts accomplished, of history. These notes do not add up to anything now, not all point in any one direction, and no one of them has much importance. They are mere fragments of something as yet intangible and not possible to recognize as a whole—nebulous wisps of whatever, when aggregated, is to be the form of things to come.

President Roosevelt, in his press conference, said a submarine, nationality unknown, had been sighted off Alaska, another off Boston.

Instantly there was uery: What was the probable nationality of these submarines? Mr. Roosevelt dropped into humor. They might have been Swiss. Could they have been Canadian? Oh, they might have been Bolivian. To yet another question, Mr. Roosevelt thought of still another landlocked nation. They might have been Afghan. (Is there an Afghan nation? It is hard, these days, to keep up on nations.)

Mr. Roosevelt Tends To Be Dramatic

BY HUMOR and in other respects, Mr. Roosevelt tried to make his announcement about submarines undramatic, casual. Ye some who heard felt that Mr. Roosevelt's party leaders in Congress might have been better pleased had Mr. Roosevelt left that announcement about submarines to come from some other source—the Navy Department, the State Department, or wherever. For Mr. Roosevelt's party leaders, trying earnestly to hold up his hands, feel that one of their handicaps is an impression on the part of the country that Mr. Roosevelt likes drama.

Had Mr. Roosevelt the cautious silence of Calvin Coolidge, or the stolid unimaginativeness of Grover Cleveland, he would be better able to get what he wants from Congress. The series of statements and actions by Mr. Roosevelt about foreign relations, beginning in December, 1937, may have been called for and may have been wise. But the frequency of them, and the pungent forcefulness of them, has, justly or not, made an impression. Some of the sentiment which questions Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to change our neutrality law is not sentiment against the merit of the proposal. It arises from the feeling that Mr. Roosevelt tends to be dramatic, and therefore may be benefited by watchful, even if friendly, scrutiny of his proposals by Congress. Almost certainly Mr. Roosevelt himself understands this. In his address to Congress Thursday, he was deliberately restrained in manner. He told Congress he was presenting the matter "in a spirit of understatement."

Former Foes Favor Neutrality Proposal

THE REAL QUESTION, as it lies in Congress, is whether Mr. Roosevelt's proposal might tend to take us toward war. Mr. Roosevelt says, in careful words, that, far from carrying us toward war, his proposal will the better keep us out. On the other hand, Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota, said over the radio that the proposal is "a blueprint of the path toward war." An intelligent, dispassionate discussion of which of these judgments is correct is what the coming debate in Congress should be.

Mr. Roosevelt has extremely impressive support. Senators utterly opposed to his domestic program, the New Deal, are firmly behind his neutrality proposal—men of such integrity of judgment and intellectual force as Democrats Glass, Byrd, Burke; Republicans Austin, Wadsworth.

Most newspapermen think, as of today, that only about 31 out of 96 Senators oppose the President's proposal. But the newspapermen think the letters from the country are having some effect. Senators not yet committed remain on the fence. A few who had committed themselves seem to be climbing back on the fence.

U. S. War Shifts To Letter-Front

THOSE LETTERS pouring in on Congress against Mr. Roosevelt's proposal are the chief reliance of Senators Borah, Clark, of Missouri, and the others who head the fight against the proposal. The quantity really is prodigious—Senator Lucas of Illinois could hardly get into his office because of the huge pile of mailbags. When letters come in such quantities as that, they cannot be read, they can only be counted. One wonders whether counting unread letters is living up to the highest obligation of statesmanship. No doubt the letters are stimulated in an organized way. And no doubt many letters express not any well-formed opinion on the merit of the President's proposal, but merely a vague fear that the proposal might take America closer to war.

The war on the letter front, the battle of the wires, has spread to the White House. The President at his press conference, answering a question, said he had received many telegrams approving his address to Congress and his proposal. Secretary Early provided details. While the President's telegrams have not been counted yet, the number is in excess of that received after any of the President's recent speeches. Of the mass, all were approving, except ten.

Maine's Governor To Idaho's: 'I Win, Potatoes to You'

Blackfoot, Idaho, Sept. 22 (AP).—Gov. Lewis O. Barrows of Maine defeated Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen of Idaho in a potato-picking contest before 10,000 persons today.

The 200-pound Eastern executive thus repeated a triumph achieved over Barzilla W. Clark, then Idaho's governor, in Maine, last year. Barrows picked 382½ pounds to Bottolfsen's 365.

It was a neck-and-neck battle from start to finish—a matter of five minutes.

The Thrill That Comes Once In A Lifetime

Cargo Curb Added To Neutrality Bill

bargo. White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said wires received by the President were all "pro" repeal, with the exception of 8 or 10 messages.

The President told reporters he had received a large stack of telegrams on his neutrality message to Congress. He said he had only seen personally some 40 or 50 sent by governors and personal friends. He referred questions on the content of the wires to Early, who said most were enthusiastic and exceeded in volume those received after any other speech by the President.

Chairman Pittman met in informal conference with Majority Leader Barkley and seven other Democratic members of his committee after Pittman and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, discussed the new legislation with the President at the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt is understood to have expressed accord with Pittman's plan to incorporate his six neutrality points in a Senate amendment to the Bloom bill, and to have approved the seventh point banning voyages of American vessels to belligerent nations. The President is understood to have indorsed the legislative "cash and carry" device as an alternative to his other suggestion that he personally proceed by executive proclamation to take the antiwar steps, coupled with traditional principles of international law. White House visitors said he preferred the latter course.

Ban Made Specific

While the President had formerly asked power to restrict movement of American vessels in "combat zones" set up by him, his first reference to a specific additional ban on American ship travel to warring nations was made in his speech to Congress Thursday.

As incorporated, along with the President's other six points in the Pittman bill, the additional seventh point provides:

"Whenever the President shall have issued a proclamation under the authority of section 1 (a) it shall thereafter be unlawful for any American vessel to carry any passengers or any articles or materials, directly or indirectly, to any State named in the proclamation."

Pittman continued to point out that the name "cash-and-carry" is a misnomer for the program, as the plan actually provides merely for transfer of title to belligerents before American goods may be shipped to a combattant in their own vessels. Cash need not necessarily be involved. The Nevadan prefers, "Come and get it," the name originally applied by Bernard Baruch as a title for the plan.

Members of the Foreign Relations committee who have reportedly agreed to vote to report out a bill, with floor reservations, after voting igan. While Vandenberg is vigorissue, include Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina; Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana; and Senator White (Republican), of Maine. Action was postponed last session by a vote of 11 to 12. Thus, the expected shift would give the Administration a majority of at least 14 of the 23-man group. Another possibility was reported last night to be Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan. While Vandenberg is vigorously opposed to embargo repeal, it was said he may be willing to vote to report a bill in order to carry the issue to open floor debate.

Gillette at White House

No allowance in the tabulations of Administration strength on committee has been made for Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who last session voted for postponement, and are not yet officially committed on the new program.

Gillette was among those called to the White House yesterday for a conference with the President. On leaving, the Iowan gave no direct reply when asked his position on repeal of the arms embargo. He said that if any specific proposal was designed to prevent American involvement in war, he was ready to vote for it. He said he would oppose any plan designed to take sides in the conflict.

Senator White was invited to the White House in company with Senate Minority Leader McNary. To these two Republican Senators, the President outlined his most recent information on the European situation, but is understood to have sought no commitment. White, who is expected to vote to report the bill, told reporters on leaving that he had an open mind on the embargo. McNary, who has made clear his position in opposition to any present change in the act, nonetheless has advised the President he would like to see a quick Senate decision, and is opposed to any filibuster. The Minority Leader has attended no meetings of the Senate isolationist bloc, although he has conferred with its leaders.

Another White House caller, as the President took personal leadership in the fight for embargo repeal, was Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, still classified as "doubtful" on the repeal issue.

Meanwhile, at the Capitol, Majority Leader Barkley, assisted by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Senate Majority Whip Minton, were reportedly lining up support for the battle ahead.

Procedure informally agreed upon calls for report of a bill as rapidly as possible from the Foreign Relations Committee, in the first two or three days, if possible. Once the bill reaches the Senate floor, Administration leaders, after a full exposition of the plan, will have little to say. Talking will be largely left after the first few days to the isolationist opponents. With all other legislative business cut off, and no committee meetings, leaders hope the opposition will complete its case in about three weeks and allow the bill to go to vote. Others voiced fear the debate might continue two or three months and conceivably into next session.

Pittman Sees No Filibuster

Senator Pittman predicted last night there will be no filibuster.

"I attribute complete sincerity to those who oppose repeal of the embargo," said Pittman. "I believe they seek as they say full and fair debate. If after two or three weeks' debate it appears they are winning no additional support, I believe they will permit the Senate to vote on the issue."

All of the isolationist leaders, including Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, and Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, have disclaimed any idea of a filibuster.

Word that the isolationist bloc has discussed formation of a national committee of private citizens to campaign against embargo repeal followed a conference yesterday in Borah's office attended by former Gov. Philip LaFollette of Wisconsin and Senate isolationists.

Ford Mentioned

In a subsequent conference with newsmen, Borah confirmed reports that Henry Ford, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and former President Hoover were mentioned for possible inclusion on the committee. Borah said no agreement had been reached on the plan. Personally, he said, he has his work cut out for him in the Senate and is not ready to take part in any such national "educational" campaign.

Support for Administration "cash and carry" proposals, Borah said, will be conditioned on what is done with the arms embargo, which the President seeks to repeal.

In other quarters it was said that former Gov. LaFollette, brought to the isolationist conference by his Senatorial brother, "Bob," took a prominent part in the meeting, reminding members of the group that the LaFollette name always has been prominently associated with "peace."

Interview With Mars

"The God of War? . . . Who, me?" said Mars, looking very much digusted.

"You're supposed to be, aren't you?" asked the Inquiring Reporter.

"Not any more," snapped Mars. "It's too brutal for me. I'm off it. I'm trying to live down my reputation for ever being connected with it.

"But the world continues to link you up with warfare," the I. R. argued.

"And does it make me sore!" exclaimed Mars. "If I knew a good lawyer I'd sue for libel. Think of my good name!"

"Did you ever have a good name?" the reporter asked.

"Well, it never was bad enough to tie me up with any part of what goes on today under the heading of war," Mars snapped. "It sickens me. I disavow the whole business."

"You wouldn't fool us?"

"Not a chance! Every time I see those cartoonists and writers linking my name up with war as it is conducted today I feel sick all over," declared Mars, wringing his hands. "I'm a tough guy and I ain't denying it. I've done some terrible things and I ain't squeamish, but murdering noncombatants, bombing orphan asylums, blowing up churches and all that sort of thing is not in my line. And do you wanna know what really drove me to reform?"

"Yes, what?"

"Those pictures of the children in gas masks. That was the payoff. I used to take pride in being the God of War, but that was before the kiddies became a fair target. I'm glad I'm out of the business."

"Are you really out?"

"You can quote me officially as saying I'm out," barked Mars, who looked quite distracted. "Booting old ladies around dark alleys, machine-gunning mothers and refusing even a decent break to the children ain't in my line, hard-boiled as I've been all my life. When I started out in life as the God of this War business it was comparatively a refined, merciful and high-class operation. Valor, individual risk, man-to-man combat and a sense of gallantry toward the innocent victims of war were all in the book of rules. There was even a certain amount of glamour and pageantry about it. I liked men in my armies, not hyenas."

"Calm yourself," the reporter urged, "you're excited."

"Why shouldn't I be excited?" cried Mars. "Me, supposedly the tough guy of all history, being humiliated by guys who are too tough for my standards!"

"But, Mars . . ." began the reporter.

"Don't even call me Mars any more!" he snapped. "Looking back over it all, I guess my right name must have been Nellie."

Tea of Mrs. Woodring's Honors Red Cross Roll Call Committee

Summons to Service Is Combined With Greeting of Friends

By Elizabeth Henney

With more than a hint of the subdued tone to be expected in this season's entertainments, the tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, combined a stern call to service with the pleasure of greeting old friends. The affair was to honor the members of the Red Cross Roll Call residential committee, of which Mrs. Woodring is chairman, and also the 186 women who will act as team captains during the roll call drive which begins next Thursday.

Mrs. Woodring received her guests in the gold ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, and was gowned in a cocoa brown print silk with a large black hat and black accessories. In the receiving line with Mrs. Woodring were Mrs. E. G. Montgomery, who wore black crepe with a gardenia corsage, white necklace and black accessories, and Mrs. James K. McClintock, who was wearing a black pin-striped jacket frock with a black tricorne felt hat and black accessories.

A center of attention during the afternoon was Mrs. Woodring's house guest, Mrs. Lewis Boys, niece of Secretary Woodring who, with her husband and their son, Lewis Boys, jr., is visiting here from their home in Independence, Kans. They arrived in town on Thursday evening and will remain here until Tuesday when they will leave for New York and a visit to the World's Fair. Following that they will return to their home by way of Pinehurst and White Sulphur Springs.

'Red Cross Bridge' Skit Presented

For yesterday's pary the long gold ballroom was decorated with Red Cross flags. At one side of the room was a large tea table and at the far end a raised platform where the guests were treated to a skit entitled "Red Cross Bridge" given by Civic Theater players under the direction of Mrs. Frederick Warren. The skit was followed by a fashion show of the costumes worn by the different units of the Red Cross and, as a finale, diplomatic children from several of the embassies and legations came in costume to show the international spirit of fellowship of the Junior Red Cross members.

Representing France was small Anne Benech, who came from behind a screen carrying a Red Cross poster almost as large as herself and which she hid herself behind during moments of embarrassment, much to the sympathetic amusement of the audience. Anne is the daughter of the Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Commander Paul Benech and Mme. Benech. Also representing France was Charles Francis Lombard, son of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, Col. Emmanuel Lombard and Mme. Lombard.

Guests Applaud Two Polish Boys

A big hand and exclamations came from the guests when the two little Polish boys appeared, brave and gay in the red, blue and silver costumes of their native land. They were Mark and John Chramiec, sons of the Military and Air Attache of the Polish Embassy, Col. Andrzej Chramiec and Mme. Chramiec. Mme. Chramiec smartly turned out in a black tailored suit watched a bit anxiously later in the afternoon as her two youngsters were plied by everyone with enormous supplies of sandwiches and cookies.

Kari and Grege Galbe, children of the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation, Jorgen Galbe, and Mme. Galbe, represented their country and wore festive costumes. America's junior Red Cross was represented by Faith and Shirley Young, children of Mrs. Philip Young, vice chairman of the roll call booths committee.

Mmes. Morris and Swift Officiate

The program over, the tea table blossomed suddenly with a variety of refreshments. Centering the table was a bouquet of dahlias, roses and gladioli, in shades of rose, red and white. Officiating at one of the tables was Mrs. Edgar Morris, wife of the roll call general chairman. She was smartly gowned in black satin and wore two large silver fox furs. Alternating with her was Mrs. Ira P. Swift, wife of Capt. Swift. She wore a dubonnet frock with a small flowered hat.

At the other end of the tea table, Mrs. Frank Keefer, wearing a paisly print frock and black hat, presided over the tea urn. Mrs. Edgar Colladay alternated with her at that end of the table. She was gowned in black with matching accessories.

Noted among the guests were Mme. Jorgen Galbe, who wore a most becoming black and white check jacket frock with white revers on the jacket and a peaked Alpine felt hat; Mrs. F. M. Goodwin in navy with a fox fur stole; Miss Edna May in navy blue with lingerie touches of white; Mrs. Charles J. Brand in black, and Mme. Solanko, wife of the Secretary of the Finnish Legation, gowned in figured print silk.

Following the tea, another nephew and niece of the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, Dr. and Mrs. Perry Martinson, accompanied by their young son, Shaffer Martinson, joined the Woodrings and Mr. and Mrs. Boys at the secretary's apartment in the Shoreham for a family dinner. Mrs. Woodring will leave today for her parents' home in Fitchburg, and will return about the first of the month, bringing her children back with her for the winter season.

Red Cross Volunteers Introduced at Tea

Red Cross volunteers introduced at the tea were: Administration, Mrs. Frederick A. Johnston; braille, Mrs. S. G. Lewis; gray lady, Mrs. Albert N. Braggs; staff assistance, Mrs. H. E. Weighmiller; motor corp, Miss Kay Joerisen; nurses aid, Countess Robert; canteen, Mrs. Laura Dizerega; production, Mrs. Lee Eardley; home service, Mrs. Frank Clark; home hygiene, Miss Caroline Thompson.

Mrs. Woodring on her return to Washington a day or so ago, announced the following composition of her committee: Mrs. E. G. Montgomery, vice chairman; Mrs. James K. McClintock, vice chairman; Mrs. Edgar B. Colladay, assistant in active charge; Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Charles A. Robinson, Mrs. Ray Spear, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. G. Elmer Flather, Mrs. E. Foxes Plentiful, Everything Points to Fine Hunting Season in Virginia Horse Country

Cub-hunting is now the order of the day for those who don't mind getting up with the sun. Armory S. Carhart, M. F. H. of Warrenton Hunt, is going out regularly. Daniel C. Sands, M. F. H., and the Middleburg Hunt met at 5 o'clock yesterday morning at Col. William Clifford's place. They had to wait half an hour for the fog to lift, but there followed a good run, with hounds working splendidly and foxes plentiful.

Everything points to a fine hunting season in the Virginia countryside this year.

AS MANY as three parties a day have been held this week in honor of Miss Fanny Carter Keith and Francis Perkins Day, who will be married this afternoon at St. James Episcopal Church, Warrenton.

Ushers and the best man arrived from other cities Thursday and that afternoon Miss Dorothy Montgomery, who will be a bridesmaid, gave a cocktail party for them. That evening they all drove to Washington for a large dinner which Miss Keith's cousin, Dr. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr., and Mrs. Hardin gave in their honor. About 40 were invited.

YESTERDAY Mrs. John Keith, the bride's mother, entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at a luncheon at her home on Winchester street, Warrenton, and before luncheon they were guests of Mrs. J. H. Dorst and her daughter, Miss Katherine Dorst, for cocktails.

Yesterday afternoon they were feted at a tea given at the North Wales Club by Mrs. Harrison Colket, who will be matron of honor, and last night, after the rehearsal, Mrs. Katherine T. Bowman gave a dinner at her home, Yorkshire House. Mr. and Mrs. Melville Bearns will entertain the bridal party at luncheon today at their home, Wood's End Farm, and tonight there will be a dance at the Warrenton Country Club for the many wedding guests who are staying over the week-end.

Others who have entertained for the young couple include Miss Constance Harrison, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Mr. and Mrs. William Letsey and Mrs. Charles Farrar, who gave a luncheon for the bride and her maids at the Warrenton Country Club Wednesday.

ANOTHER COUPLE being widely entertained are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wallach, who were recently married in New York. Dr. and Mrs. James Sinclair gave a cocktail party for them earlier this week at their home on Lee's Ridge. Thursday afternoon they were honored by Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, jr. Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Charrington, who were married two weeks ago and have just returned from a honeymoon in Canada, were feted by Mr. and Mrs. William N. Wilbur at a recent party.

Miss Neville Atkinson will give a party tonight at Mansfield, her home near Middleburg, in honor of Miss Polly Montague and H. Gwynne Tayloe, whose wedding will take place October 7 at Middleburg.

Thad Brown has been visting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sabin at their home near Middleburg this week and rode horseback daily and went cubbing while here. He returned to Washington yesterday and will leave tonight for Harvard Law School.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vanderpool Clark will move today into the home they recently purchased from Raymond Guest, in the Piedmont Hunt Country near Atoka. Since their marriage they have been living at "Mt. Defiance", which they leased from Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Bishop.

20 Latin-American Republics Represented At Ceremonies; Jose Richling Speaks at Dedication Rites in the Court of Peace

Several social affairs were scheduled for the distinguished group, headed by Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull and representatives of 20 South, Central and Latin-American republics, who gathered at the World's Fair yesterday for the celebration of Pan American Day. Highlight of the program was Secretary Hull's speech at 3:30, which was broadcast throughout the United States and to Canada, Europe and South America.

The official party arrived at the Fair by special car and were greeted by Julius C. Holmes, administrative assistant in charge of foreign participation and protocol, and formerly in the State Department under Mr. Hull. A luncheon in honor of the distinguished guests began at 1:30, with Harvey D. Gibson, board chairman of the fair, presiding.

The program, which was held in the Court of Peace, included a speech of dedication by E. F. Roosevelt, fair director of foreign participation, and Jose Richling, Minister from Uruguay, who is vice chairman of the governing board of the Pan American Union. Mayor LaGuardia also spoke.

Later in the afternoon Mr. Hull received the gold medal of the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission for his work in fostering peace between the United States and its neighbors to the south. Thomas J. Watson, chairman of the commission and former president of the International Chamber of Commerce, who is well known in Washington, made the presentation.

A reception at the Federal Building and a military review in honor of the guests closed the afternoon's festivities. In the evening the officials met at the clubhouse of the National Advisory Committees Building for a buffet supper and then went to the Federal Building to witness "The Story of Three Flowers," a symphony of water, light, flame and music by the Trytons' World's Fair Band. They concluded their visit with a view of the fountain display at the Lagoon of Nations.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, who celebrated her eighty-fifth birthday on Thursday, was among the guests of honer at the festivities.

Razing of Hippodrome Stirs Old Memories In New Yorkers

New York, Sept. 22.

THERE are so many changes around town—I mean materially, of course—that some of us are a little baffled. For one thing, the dear old Hippodrome, at Forty-third street and Sixth avenue, will soon be entirely level with the ground. I visited it the other day. The roof was gone, and its recent odors—of circus elephants, rasslers, cut rate opera tenors, jai alai players and $5 prize fighters—were released and evident. I left quickly, remembering that this once great playhouse was the first introduction of countless thousands of New Yorkers to the wonderland of the stage, peopled by dozens of clowns like Toto, stupendous spectacles, such as the one where platoons of chorines walked down into its tank.

Two of the best new buildings however, are coming up right here in my own Murray Hill neighborhood, within slingshot distance of my house, which I share with 250 other folk.

I have told you about the famous Information Building, now being built at Forty-second street and Park avenue, just across from Grand Central Terminal. It goes fast, and Hall, who infests the neighborhood, says it should be finished in a month.

No more than 50 feet from it is due to rise another interesting structure. Do you or Pappy remember the famous Belmont Hotel? It stood at Forty-second and Park, and 20 years ago was a landmark, and a haunt of travelers from all over the world. Gosh—it was there that I first shook the large hand of Jack Dempsey, just before his fight with Firpo. Disaster caught up with the spot and for years the site has been a hole in the ground. Now they are about to build on it a handsome building in which will be the head offices of five major airlines, at present scattered.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN.—My deah, you'll really have to hurry ovah, and drop everything. Send the kids to mamma's. For the nobby set here is agog over the fact that New York is to have an authentic copy of Ciro's, the famous supper club of London. It's to be on Central Park South, and it will be staffed by many of the original Ciro gang, from operator (minor) to chef (major). The latter is M. Baz, if you care. My deahs, the Prince of Wales was one of its prime patrons in London. I can just imagine the local stuffed shirts fighting, and paying fabulous prices, for opening night reservations. Of course, as a newspaper girl, I'll crash, but undoubtedly will have to eat with the help, who will be far better company than the cash customers, if I know my cafe society, which I jolly well think I do.

Two Views of New Evening Coiffure

Many ingenious, even distinguished coiffures have been brought out recently, but not all are destined to flatter the face. Some are too acute, others too soignee. Here are two views of a noted stylist's arrangement aimed at creating a frame for the face. The blonde above wears softly-placed deep waves forming a crown above the smoothly-brushed hair line. The ears are exposed, but the harsh line behind them is softened with curls as shown at left. The back of the hair is as neat as a school marm's.

Bravery in Action

She firmly prevented her French barber from completely scalping her in the back with his razor when he cut her hair, and she succeeded in making him take her suggestions as to how her hair should be dressed.

When she went into a drug store to purchase Oldboy's Moth Killer, she tenaciously held out against the clerk's prolonged harangue that she buy Newboy's Insect Eradicator instead, and managed to leave the store with the product she asked for.

When the taxi driver left the door swinging open after she entered the cab, she sat back grandly and refused to shut it; when he overcharged her 10 cents on a trip into a strange neighborhood, she did not meekly pay to "avoid argument," but boldly produced her zone map.

When she failed to find any shoes she liked after trying on a dozen pair, she told the salesman so definitely while still sitting in her stocking feet, and made no apologetic promise to "come back" or "think it over."

She had a "skin analysis" from a high-powered demonstrator at a cosmetic counter and left with only a small jar of cleansing cream instead of the $35 worth of rejuvenating creams, ointments and lotions she was told she needed desperately.

When she encountered downtown a tiresome old acquaintance she had not seen for ten years, she did not weaken and acquiesce in a plan for them to get together at bridge the following Friday.

She held out finally and effectually for a black instead of a grape, wine, plum, green, or mustard hat.

When the woman in front of her at the movie asked if she "minded" her hat, she replied in definite tones, "Yes."

When she found herself next to a taciturn or stupid dinner partner she did not exhaust herself trying to draw him out but undismayed by the long pauses, settled down to enjoy the food.

She did not attend any futile business meetings of her club or her committee to keep from "offending the girls" and she never attended a pageant, or a stereopticon lecture to help make a crowd.

When she started to powder her nose at the one dresser in her party hostess' guest room and the other women began to elbow in upon her, she did not withdraw to a corner to use her own compact, but firmly held her ground until she had finished her primping.

She did not answer personal letters from anyone except her immediate relatives and she gave no Christmas presents to any persons to save embarrassment in event they should present her with gifts.

She was able to say "No" without adding a "but," a "because," a "really," or a "maybe," or a "you see"—just a pleasant, a definite and final "NO."

Your Figure, Madame!

Diet and Exercise Only Healthful Way to Slimness

THERE IS NO such phenomenon as a woman without curiosity . . . and a woman on a reducing diet is about twice as curious as ordinarily. She just can't help wondering whether, in this age of miracles, there isn't some method by which reducing is made a little easier.

Take those baths: Turkish, steam, cabinet. Some people do take them and lose! But the whole thing is a snare and a delusion. What they lose is water—not fat—and that only temporarily. This apparent weight loss is accomplished by the simple expedient of sweating, and sweating is not the same thing as reducing.

Lose Water, Not Fat

Fat does not break down to form water, and even though you lose several pounds of water your weight will shortly be right back where it was unless you break down the fat. This process is also simple and it is invariably the same. It requires only that you eat fewer calories (units of heat, or energy) than you need, so that you convert your stored fat into energy. That's all there is to that.

But to get back to some of these more novel methods of reducing . . . Every now and then someone trots out the idea of exercising in a rubber or woolen garment to reduce. Again the weight loss depends mainly on the sweating. True, you might exercise enough to use up a few extra calories, but the amount would be negligible in comparison with the discomfort.

Some of the most engaging ideas involve tossing something into the bath water. This is usually warranted to make the fat dissolve and disappear down the drain. You almost expect to emerge from your bath slim!

One of the recurrent questions is whether the use of strong cathartics will aid the weight loss. This is merely another method of drawing the water from the body. Such measures rush the food out of the system before the body has had a chance to assimilate the elements it needs. A precarious method this, for reducing! Anyone who tries it is likely to discover that it is much easier to upset the digestive system than to set it to running smoothly again.

Seldom Fault of Glands.

Thyroid extract to stimulate activity of the thyroid gland is very beneficial in the few cases of glandular obesity of this type. But less than 5 per cent of all the people who are overweight can blame their trouble on their glands! So it is unlikely that anything is wrong with yours. If you think there is, see your doctor. Don't experiment with drugs and run the risk of wrecking your health. That applies to reducing drugs of any kind.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Unable to Conquer Her Supposedly Selfish Instincts, Girl Asks How to Become Fine and Generous

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Although I have been aware of how self centered I am, I had believed I was slowly conquering the trait. But I am beginning to despair. Last night, a dear friend of mine—who lives in the same house—got sick in the night and came to me for help. I haven't been sleeping well and he wakened me about 3 a. m.

I directed him to the medicine cabinet and told him what would be the best remedy, but my only thought—I blush to confess—was that I wished he would hurry and get the stuff and get out and let me go back to sleep. I didn't give a hang about his welfare. Had our positions been reversed, he would never have felt that way. He would have thrown himself completely into the task of aiding and comforting me, even though he was tired and had to work the next day. I let him down horribly.

Several times a very dear girl friend of mine has been at the house, intoxicated. Because she would be in a quarrelsome, talkative mood, I saw to it that she did not share my room to sleep it off. I knew if I kept her with me—where she would be much better off—she would waken in the night and start talking; perhaps make a scene, wanting more liquor. I didn't want to be bothered. I wanted to rest. So I got her out of the house and home, at the cost of people knowing about her condition, rather than suffer personal inconvenience.

If I had a $1 in my purse, and the knowledge that I would get more money next day, I would lend that dollar gladly, or give it away. But if I had $1 in the world and no prospects of getting any more for several days, and you asked me for a dollar, I'd lie and say I was broke, even though I knew you needed help . . . I am so ashamed of myself, yet I do these small things over and over, just instinctively, on the spur of the moment. I want to be fine and generous; to have everyone love me; never to do a mean thing; to be on the square, always; never to let anyone down; put others before me, even at a sacrifice. That is my ideal. But I fall horribly short of it.

I guess you will think this letter is crazy. But please answer me, as I need your help. I've no one to talk to about this problem and I can't figure it out for myself. One thing I am going to do and that is get back in the church. But that won't solve the whole problem and I am counting on your help. A. N. L.

Charity Is Said To Begin at Home

DEAR A. N. L.: It is axiomatic that self preservation is the first law of nature, instinctively respected by all forms of life. And charity, an old proverb tells us, begins at home. Before we can hope to succor others, our own house of life must be in order. This means that we must have brought into being, and must have taken steps to safeguard, strengths (or resources) of many kinds. Which means, in turn, that we must follow an orderly, purposeful, productive and preservative pattern of behavior—physically, emotionally, socially and financially.

One judges from your story (more than half of which is omitted here) that you are living in continual, sordid chaos; that you are drifting like a chip in a muddy maelstrom. How, then, could you be expected to throw out a cheerful lifeline to others? It is all you can do to keep yourself afloat—and that not too successfully. I imagine that you are chronically exhausted, psychically and financially; and that financially you live from hand to mouth.

I imagine, too, that your somewhat morbid—and erstwhile frustrated—desire to be a supposedly noble person is an intended form of compensation for what you feel to be your sinfulness. I think you have an orthodox conscience, which is demanding appeasement or satisfaction or atonement—call it what you will—for your having strayed from conventional paths of virtue. I think you have completely lost your way and are going in circles that are leading downward—through a maze of demoralizing associations—to both soul and body sickness.

In my opinion, your angry, instinctive demand for sleep and rest, for uninterrupted night-time isolation, is the soundest instinct of the many conflicting drives that are tearing you apart today. Your furious resentment of blundering, selfish intruders is a fundamentally healthy reaction: It is the life force within you, crying out for preservation. The best single piece of advice I can give you is to obey that instinct; to take whatever steps are necessary to insure unbroken sleep, for at least eight hours every night.

As for your anguished scrupulosity about your reluctance to lend the last cent at your command—that is sheer neurotic nonsense. Any healthy-minded individual would consider it only common sense to keep enough money on hand to pay-as-he-goes. If he fails to do that, he is simply shifting the strain of his short-sighted generosity to other shoulders. Either he must borrow, in turn; or suffer temporary loss of efficiency which penalizes confreres or employer.

As I see it, your alleged despair over your failure to achieve perfection in small ways, is symptomatic of nervous sickness. And this sickness stems, I believe, from physical exhaustion, moral distress and general confusion in your social and financial affairs. Your whole way of living should be revised. You should find a place of residence that affords a decent, dignified home background; that invites orderly habits and regular hours: that provides association with normal people.

Give up illicit affairs. Avoid drunken companions. Turn away from carousing, as a supposed means of recreation. Go back to church—as you have suggested doing. Get out of doors and interested in sports—such as swimming, tennis, golf, skating, riding or even walking. Balance your budget. All these are rungs in the ladder leading to good health and normal perspective. When you are possessed of these two attributes, you will find it not too difficult to play the role of wayside angel in the troubled affairs of your intimates. M. H.

New 'Milk' Bath Is Relaxing

Famous beauties of history and pampered fairy-tale princesses doted on milk baths and they were wise. Such baths are relaxing, soothing and lend a softness to the skin. A new fluffy milk bath powder now available turns the water milky white and silky to the touch with a blanket of bubbles a foot deep on top to foam around you with little swishing noises.

The bath should last about ten minutes. The bubbles are cleansing, as well as refreshing. You shower or simply wipe them off, for they are greasless, soapless and alkali free. They do not get into the eyes or irritate the most delicate skin. The bath is soothing after a hot or tiresome day, and it is perfect before dressing for a gala evening to make your shoulders and arms satiny smooth and fragrant.

Scientist Finds Men Prefer Brunettes

Contrary to popular opinion brunets have more sex appeal than blondes, according to an experiment conducted by Dr. William Moulton Marston, psychologist.

In a poll of 20,000 men, the totals of which were published in a recent issue of Your Life magazine, the brunet, Dr. Marston finds, gets 62 per cent of the votes. The difference between the blonde and brunet in allure is attributed to the endocrine glands. His survey was made over nine years.

Dr. Marston sums up with the conclusions: "Brunets are the natural man conquerors. It isn't a matter of good looks. The blonde may be twice as curvy and symmetrical, her features may be gems of classic beauty and the brunet's face a quaint mosiac of irregularity. But the dark-haired girl has the motive power, the feminine punch that scores a knockout when it lands.

Germans Get Richest Slice Of Poland

Russians Take Most Land; Warsaw Eating Horse Meat

By Joseph Barnes.

Copyright, 1939, N. Y. Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The partition of Poland became an accomplished fact here today, with the announcement of a military demarcation line agreed on by the German and Soviet high commands.

The line places under Red army control about three-fifths of Poland and almost half its population, and leaves the Nazi army in possession of nearly all Poland's factories and industrial resources.

The line cuts Poland from north to south, along the four rivers, Pisa, Narew, Vistula and the San. It runs through the middle of Warsaw, leaving the bulk of the city on the German side. It also runs through Sandomierz, center of Poland's ambitious attempt to build a new industrial base. It ends at the Pzoker Pass to the Carpathian mountains.

Soviets Get Oil Fields

Of Poland's 13 cities with more than 100,000 population—excluding Warsaw and Danzig—9 are on the German side of this line. Almost all Polish industry—centered iin Silesia—will be German. Besides farming land and timber, the Soviets apparently will get the Galician oil fields at Drohobycz.

German official sources insisted here tonight that this line is temporary and that it was drawn along these rivers for primarily military reasons. It is admitted that the eventual frontier will diverge from this line, only to bend itself around local ethnographical difficulties.

Since the line runs through purely Polish territory this regard for ethnographic justice evades even Nazi racial doctrine and the surprising Bolshevik interest in "blood related" people.

Nothing was said here today about the possible survival of a Polish state, but the impression persisted in well informed circles that at least a protectorate is still to be expected in and around Warsaw. The German army high command announced that both Russian and German troops already were proceeding toward this line today "in full agreement."

Armies to Rule For Time

The military administration of Poland will continue until negotiations—not yet begun—finally fix the frontier and decide on what form of permanent administration will be given by each country to the Poles themselves.

The emergence of some kind of neutralized Polish state is predicted here by many observers as a buffer, desired equally by both Germans and Russians. It is recognized that only a very large or a very thin buffer state can separate the 750-mile frontier set up between the Nazis and the Bolsheviks. Today's line also brought Soviet troops up to the East Prussian frontier on the north, besides giving them full control of the Polish-Rumanian frontier and most of the Polish-Hungarian frontier, which came into being for the first time last night.

Russians Relieve Nazis

German military circles pointed with technical pride today to the report that Soviet troops had relieved German troops fighting for the Polish fortress of Lwow (Lemberg) without even interrupting the fighting. The same circles claim that the demarcation line announced today was already agreed on last Sunday, when the Russians began their invasion. There is no explanation here of why, in this case, the German army was obliging enough to conquer most of the eastern side of the line as a present for its new Soviet ally.

There was little other military news today. After the evacuation of 1,300 foreigners from Warsaw yesterday, Berlin apparently has lost hope of a speedy surrender of the city by the Poles. Except for bombardment of railroad stations, through streets and other "military objectives," no immediate military attempt to capture the city was predicted here.

German attention began today for the first time to concentrate on the problems of organizing a new empire in the east. Gauleiters and four-year-plan officials are already holding meetings to consider plans for the Silesian industrial areas. Gdynia, long held by Germans to be an economically idiotic undertaking, has been renamed Gotenhaven, and promised a flourishing future as a German port. The riches of other sections of Poland are being inventoried in government offices and in the newspapers.

Police Help Mop Up

Special police battalions have been set up to protect this new wealth and to help the army in its job of mopping up. Poles who were involved in the civilian fighting against local Germans in Poland are being given "the fate they deserve."

In Lodz, where it is reported that 90 per cent of retail trade was in the hands of Jews, who were accused of trying to provoke trouble by hoarding their stocks and raising prices, the police have taken over control of goods and distribution.

The Germanization of these districts is in full blast. The leading Nazi newspaper of Beuthen, on the old German frontier, published yesterday an attack on Poles, who continue to say "good morning" and "goodbye" in Polish. It wrote: "Our fatherland has become German again and therefore should hear no foreign greetings. The Germans who have lived so long under the Polish knout must feel themselves provoked by hearing them."

Reich Gets Richest Slice

Copyright, 1939, by the New York Times.

New York, Sept. 22.—Germany and Russia will share about equally Poland's 150,000 square miles of territory and her 32,000,000 inhabitants. There, however, the equality of sharing ends. Germany took much the richest slice.

In the western half of the country assigned to Germany by the Berlin-Moscow negotiators lies more than 90 per cent of the coal, lignite and iron ore resources of Poland, resources estimated at $158,000,000,000 and thus seventh in the countries of the world.

Contains 6,736 Power Plants

In that area also are most of Poland's 6,736 hydro-electric plants, or as many as escaped German bombs and shells, five of the seven principal cities, the capital of Warsaw, all of the Polish high tension power lines and three-quarters of its railroad trackage. There also is the "Holy City" of Czestochowa.

Compared to this industralized, relatively rich region, with an area roughly that of the State of Missouri, the U. S. S. R. received the peat bogs of eastern Poland, the Pripet Marshes along the one-time Polish-Russian frontier, a relatively thin slice of an industrial area along the southern border and a lot of farm and forest land, much of it undeveloped.

From the standpoint of mineral resources, industry and wealth the partition might well be compared to one which would divide the United States at the Mississippi River, with Germany taking the eastern half of the country and the U. S. S. R. the western.

Even on the basis of land under cultivation, according to the official statistical year book of Poland for 1938, Russia gets none the best of the bargain. Although the majority of the 16,850,000 hectares (2,471 jority of the 16,850,000 hectares (2,471,000 acres) under cultivation lie in the nine voivodships, or states, over which she was given total or partial control, the higher yield of the land in the seven western, southern and central voivodships taken by Germany offsets the greater land area.

Table Reveals Wealth

In a table showing distribution of industries on the basis of workers employed the year book gives the following percentages for German-held territory: Mining, industry and public works, 86.2 per cent; electro-technical, 91.5 per cent; chemicals, 87.1 per cent; textiles, 97.4 per cent; paper, 76.6; leather, 84.8; timber, 68.9; foodstuffs, 80.6; clothing, 87.1; toys, 99.1; printing and allied trades, 85.8; building trades, 90.5; electric-power plants, waterworks, 86 per cent; public works, 77.3.

Fought over from 1914 to 1921 by German, Russian and Polish armies, the country had adopted a long-range program of road building, hydro-electric development, public works, and exploitation of natural resources, which had placed it seventh in coal production, seventh in lignite production, fourteenth in crude oil output, tenth in salt, eighteenth in iron ore, fourteenth in pig iron, eleventh in steel, twelfth in rolled iron and steel products, fifth in zinc, twelfth in lead, sixteenth in silver, eleventh in cement, ninth in sulphuric acid, tenth in sulphate of ammonia, and well up the list in many other products useful in war, as in peace.

Its production, now mostly in the hands of Germany, exceeded that of its conqueror in the categories of crude oil output, silver, nitrate of lime, nitrate of soda and natural phosphates.

Mein Kampf Sales Decline In Wake of War

Booksellers Observe Previous Activities Boomed Purchases

Up to the time the war broke out, any unusual developments involving Adolf Hitler caused a spurt in the sales of his book, "Mein Kampf," Washington bookstores reported yesterday.

Some book sellers, however, have observed a definite slackening in demand for the book since the war.

Nevertheless, local bookstores were unanimous in placing it among their best sellers. Brentano's, William Ballantyne & Sons, and Woodward & Lothrop, according to reliable estimates, have sold more than 1,000 copies of the two unexpurgated editions, both of which retail for $3.

2,000 Possible

How many copies have been bought by Washingtonians from all sources — including out-of-town sources—is a guess. The total may be as high as 2,000 copies.

That Hitler is a millionaire as a result of sales of the book is not questioned by those in the book selling and publishing business.

Hitler, Government investigators have learned, keeps income from his foreign sales in a special account in a Swiss bank. The name of the bank is known.

Sales throughout the United States of the Reynal and Hitchcock unexpurgated English edition, according to latest available figures, have totaled 86,000 copies since the book was brought out late last winter.

Another Edition, Too

Hitler draws royalties on this edition. Sales of the unexpurgated edition put out by Stackpole & Sons, New York, on which he does not draw royalties, may have been nearly as large.

The latter edition was withdrawn early in the summer by court order as a result of a copyright infringement suit brought by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, holders of the copyright in this country.

The German-American bund has sold directly in this country copies of the edition printed in Germany, on which Hitler's royalties are said to run close to 100 per cent. Presumably, there have been direct sales in this country through other sources.

Some local bookstores found the demand for the Stackpole and Sons unexpurgated edition much greater than for the Reynal and Hitchcock edition.

Reynal and Hitchcock have been turning their profits over to the fund for relief of German refugees.

Hitler Tours Polish War Zone, Gazes on Warsaw

Berlin, Sept. 22. (AP).—Adolf Hitler got a distant view of Warsaw today, surrounded by his troops. He saw the city from a high point as he toured the operations zone of the Nazi north army, in an advance southward from East Prusia over the Bug and Narew rivers.

The trip also enabled Hitler to see the work of the German air force in crippling rail communications leading into Warsaw.

To the eastward he was shown how German bombs wrecked a Polish armored train.

French Use Pigs To Explode Mines

Schengen, Luxemburg Frontier, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—French troops advancing along the Moselle River in the last four days have used thousands of pigs to touch off mined areas along the Luxemburg frontier.

After the pigs were blown to bits, the French advanced and occupied the terrain thus cleaned of mines.

The French are bringing up more pigs, hoping to carry out a further advance.

Nazi Strategists In the Doghouse

Berlin, Sept. 22 (AP)—Because they fell out of step with Adolf Hitler in 1938, two of Germany's most prominent strategists failed to take part in the conquest of Poland.

They are Col. Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch and Col. Gen. Ludwig Beck, both former chiefs of the army general staff.

Both volunteered for service, it was disclosed tonight, but neither was accepted.

Holy Book Used in Jewish Rite

Yom Kippur Prayers for Democracy

Preservation of Ideals Keynote Jewish Celebration Of Holiest Day

Rededication to basic moral and spiritual principles of democracy keynoted messages by rabbis here last night, as thousands of prayer-shawled Jews heard the haunting melody of the Kol Nidre open their holiest event—Yom Kippur, day of atonement.

Its origin buried in hitory's dust, the Kol Nidre was chanted for the seventeenth consecutive year by Cantor Louis Novick at Adas Israel Synagogue, where Rabbi Solomon H. Metz warned that the Biblical influence must be strengthened if "we are to preserve our democratic ideals, the inviolation of human rights and dignity of the human will."

Thrice-intoned, the chanting was followed by a congregational response of the Yom Kippur psalm—"Light is sown to the righteous and joy to the pure in heart"—after which they joined in other verses of the Machzar, holy book used only during the high holidays.

Candles Lighted

Earlier in the day, just before sunset, candles were lighted in Jewish homes, symbolizing the soul as the Lord's flame, and, following cusiom, sins were forgiven. Entering synagogues, worshippers placed offerings upon plates on a white-clothed table, symbolic of charity's appeals. Heavy meals were eaten before the rites, which are marked by fasting and meditation.

A country built on the firm foundation of kindness, justice, charity and mercy can and will survive, Rabbi M. H. Levinson said at Beth Sholom-Talmud Torah Synagogue, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest.

"Theatening winds are blowing now from all directions," he declared. "May the Almighty bless this great country of ours—the champion of democracy and equality to all who seek protection under its wings."

The Washington Hebrew Temple congregation last night heard Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld warn that "the preservation of democracy is the duty of every Jew in America." There, as in other worship places, memorial services—Yizkor—will be held this morning. Rabbi Abram Simon, late leader of the Washington Temple, will be memorialized there.

Democracies Praised

Righteous people make up the democratic powers, Rabbi Henry Segal told his congregation at B'Nai Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, stressing that while people today are pessimistic about the outlook for the future, the message of Yom Kippur gives them a sense of hope and confidence. While the righteous may suffer, their path is illuminated with the eternal light," he said.

At Chev Sholom Synagogue, Rabbi Zemach Green saw "the world eventually returning to a true appreciation of religious ideals," advising that "spiritual hope is the only hope in this crisis." Rabbi Charles Williamowsky, of Alexandria, addressed the Southeast Hebrew Congregation in place of Rabbi Julius Loeb.

Yom Kippur rites end at sundown today with one blast of the Shofar (ram's horn) and the congregations' repeating "The Lord, He is my God," seven times.

Fireworks Boom as Regatta Queen Is Crowned

Regatta Thrills 7,500 And Queen

Brilliantly Lighted Yachts in Review For Coronation of Ruth Overton

A queen held court on the Potomac last night, with a gay flotilla of pleasure craft for a retinue and 7,500 spectators along Hains Point as loyal, if chilly, subjects. Blank shells pounded out a 21-gun salute from the point as Assistant Secretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble placed a tiara on the blonde head of Ruth Overton, who was seated in state on the Coast Guard cutter Calypso.

Lights Gleam On Yachts

With the Calypso moored in mid-Potomac, the queen of the 1939 President's Cup Regatta, daughter of the Louisiana Senator, watched from the water as nine yachts, in brightly illuminated disguise, passed in review.

The carnival fleet included a Venetian gondola, several sailboats and a minature battleship, outlined against the night by lavish strings of electric lights. A Mississippi River showboat, complete with paddle-wheel, calliope music and flaming smokestacks, drew salvos of applause from the Queen and her court and the reviewing stands on land.

Gliding downstream and standing off the tip of Hains Point, the yachts became a bridgeof color between the more prosaic lights blinking on the Maryland ad Virginia shores.

Flares on Canoes

The Washington Canoe Club paid its homage to the Queen with elaborate maneuvers between the Calypso and reviewing stand. Eight canoes which had slipped into position without attracting attention suddenly touched off railroad flares at bow and stern and paddled out the initials PCR—President's Cup Regatta.

The carnival came to a loud and colorful end with a fireworks display set off from the Virginia shore. Bursting rockets lit up the land from Gravelly Point to the railroad bridge and illuminated the coal-black Potomac with metallic greens, reds and blues.

First prize for yacht decorations, a ship's clock, went to J. H. Jacobson, whose Spica was illuminated as a sort of floating merry-go-round, releasing rockets as it chugged down the river. Robert Billups took second prize, a nautical rack bag, with his Bobette. Folly, entered by Robin Hood, was awarded third prize, a pair of binoculars.

Also in the fleet were Oncla II, Dr. G. B. Gill; Fifty-Fifty, Edward C. Baltz; Evelyn S. Frank Schroff; Maybenot, Dr. Lyman Sexton; Encore, Dr. Harry Smith, and Lanar, Ed Zimmermann.

Judges were Mrs. L. M. Leisenring, of the Corcoran Art Gallery; Melville B. Grosvenor, assistant editor of the National Geographic, and Jim Berryman, newspaper cartoonist.

Only Prague Restless on Eve Of War, Says Returned Cleric

War came for the Rev. Albert J. McCartney, D. D., pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, just as it did in 1914, in a quiet English church—but this time with an air raid warning as invocation.

Dr. McCartney told of the incident at his home, 1302 Eighteenth street northwest, shortly after his return here from war-torn Europe. He arrived in this country Thursday aboard the S. S. Volendam.

"I was attending services at Wellington Barracks Chapel," he explained. "The minister's first words—the invocation, if you will—warned us not to be disturbed by an air raid signal expected in the middle of the services. It was just a trial alarm, he said."

"But in the midst of the sermon," Dr. McCartney continued, "a verger interrupted the minister to tell him of the announcement of war. The minister finished his sermon but shortly after he had stopped speaking there was a real air raid signal." The alarm came to warn London after a plane, falsely identified as German, had been sighted over the city.

With Dr. McCartney and his two sons, Benjamin, 23, and Noble, 21, the clergyman had been making an automobile tour of Europe.

Surprisingly, he said, Germany, France and Italy gave no omen of the approaching war. In a trip along the Maginot Line from Strasburg to the Swiss border, the pillboxes seemed very quiet and no soldiers were in evidence," the minister said.

The first warning of disquietude Dr. McCartney observed in his tour was a hint of unrest in Prague, he said. A contact with the "Czecho-Slovak grapevine" indicated that the people, superficially satisfied, were planning a revolt.

Before leaving Dr. McCarney became accustomed to being torn out of bed at early hours of the morning for air raids warning. All the guests would assemble in the corridor, he said.

"We all got pretty well acquainted," he said. "The only trouble was it was difficult to recognize a man in pajamas and gas mask you had seen a few hours before in dress suit."

U. S. Aide Indicted For Forgery; Jury Accuses 8 Others

Grand larceny—John B. Edwards, 29.
Selling goods imported "not for sale"—Helimut P. W. Schoenwaldt.

Jurisdictional Row In Truck Strike Being Adjusted

The first inkling that negotiations are under way toward settlement of an A. F. of L. jurisdictional dispute which is partially to blame for the ten-day-old truck drivers' strike here was given yesterday by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

At her press conference she said steps are being taken to iron out differences between the engineers and teamsters unions, both A. F. of L. affiliates, over the driving of trucks carrying premixed concrete to construction jobs.

It was learned that by the time the 400 striking truck drivers reach a new wage agreement with the employers association the jurisdictional row probably will be settled, so workers can return to their jobs at once.

No progress was reported yesterday toward reaching an agreement on the wage issue. A meeting of the operators is scheduled this morning.

4 Men Arrested In Numbers Raids

They were charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. A fourth suspect, seized in the 1400 block Eleventh street northwest, identified himself as Arthur L. Harris, colored, 25, 900 block Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was charged with the same offenses.

Pretrial Hearings Settle 27 Suits

The District Court's new pretrial division swept through 52 cases in its first week of operation, settled 27 of them and simplified the issues in the remainder for rapid handling when they reach trial.

Justice Laws, who presides at the pretrial hearings, reported the work of the first week yesterday.

3 Firemen Hurt As Flames Raze Vacant Dwelling

Three firemen were injured yesterday in a blaze which destroyed a bungalow at 5104 Call street southeast. The fire is under investigation by police and the fire marshal's office.

The injured were Sergt. Felix Poole, 48; Private Anton S. Sneigoski, 42, and Private Claude R. Bush, 38, all of No. 27 Engine Co., who received minor burns, and were treated at the scene.

When firemen arrived they found the house already burned out, the roof gone and one side ready to collapse. They were forced to lay 2,000 feet of hose. The house was owned by Augustus Arthur, colored, but was unoccupied.

Ginger Injects Some Into Her New Comedy

'Fifth Avenue Girl' A Light-Hearted Flippancy at Keith's

"FIFTH AVENUE GIRL." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen play by Allan Scott, starring Ginger Rogers, with Walter Connolly, Veree Teasdale, James Ellison, Tim Holt, Kathryn Adams, Franklin Pangborn, Ferike Boros, Louis Calhern, Theodor Von Eltz and Alexander D'Arcy. Directed by Gregory LaCava. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

As all Fifth Avenue girls should be, Ginger Rogers' "Fifth Avenue Girl" is pleasant, light and full of joy of living.

Since all film comedies cannot be "Bachelor Mothers", Miss Rogers' new adventure, which opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's, should arouse no tears of disappointment. Standing on its own ground, the film affords some neat opportunities not only for Miss Rogers, but also for such expert performers as Walter Connolly and Veree Teasdale and two younger players, Tim Holt and James Ellison.

Connolly is an unhappy man. Business conditions are frankly terrible. He has made much money from his Amalgamated Pump, but wife Veree Teasdale is caworting with a young man; son Tim Holt is giving all his attention to polo and daughter Kathryn Adams is, unbeknownst to her family, conducting a one-sided love affair with the radical chauffeur, played by James Ellison.

"I am not a capitalist," sighs Connolly, gaping at his spacious marble halls. "I am a victim of the capitalistic system."

S. O. S. to Ginger

Leaving labor talk, which continues to be a welcome, but uncertain topic for celluloid conversation, the rich man goes into the park and meets Ginger. On a crowded bench he learns that despite her own troubles, she is not one to worry, so off they go for a riotous evening at the Flamingo Club, which leads unemployed Ginger into his employ. She is to be the bait to lead his straying family back to him.

That it works goes without saying. Sleek Veree Teasdale tries psychology, passion and tears to win him back, but not until she whips up an old-fashioned beef stew does the huge house seem like a home. Backstairs, the volatile chauffeur mutters about the day which all good revolutionaries are supposed to mutter about. To prove her love for him, the pampered daughter of the house announces that she is about to take a job. "What!" cries he, "and deprive all those who really need the work the chance to earn their living?"

Indeed, so light and unassuming is "Fifth Avenue Girl," that it is ridiculously pompous to bicker about its occasionally arid stretches of dialogue or to reveal any more of its plot. It was filmed to be taken at its face value, not to be dissected.

An Excellent Cast

The inimitable Ginger again proves her facility without the aid of her twinkling toes. Connolly and Miss Teasdale are obviously only playing roles, but they are always amusing and Ellison's chauffeur is as stiff and talkative as he should be. Tim Holt, Jack Holt's young son, reveals a pleasant personality in a role which seems to be a trifle beyond his years.

The Keith short subjects are adept attention-catchers, especially Walt Disney's Donald Duck adventure, which places the uniform of a policeman over that doughty sportsman's tail-feathers. "Zoo" depicts the remarkably modern attention which St. Louis affords its captive guests. With a sparsity of cages and a thought for the animals' feelings this zoo permits some of its better behaved creatures to roam among mere bipeds with complete freedom.

A "Stranger Than Fiction" release and the Pathe News, containing excerpts from President Roosevelt's Thursday speech to Congress complete a bill that is certain first aid to the worried headline reader.

RICHARD L. COE.

Metropolitan

"Golden Boy," Columbia's deft picturization of the Clifford Odets stage hit of the same name, continues to smash its way to further popularity this week as chief feature of the new bill at the Metropolitan Theater.

Adhering—until its final sequence—rigidly to the content and movement of the stage version, the film play abounds in humor and excitement as its titular character struggles to make up his mind precisely what it is he wants from life and how best to obtain it. Discarding a career as a concert violinist to adopt the prize ring, as a short cut to financial independence, this bewildered youth finally gives up the gloves and takes the girl as chief aid to future happiness. The tragic denoument of the play has been transposed into a happy ending. Otherwise, "Golden Boy" is a picture of fine integrity and high value as pulsating entertainment.

The costellar roles are played in their best manner by William Holden and Barbara Stanwyck. The principal supporting parts are judiciously entrusted to Adolphe Menjou, Lee J. Cobb, Sam Levene, Ed Brophy, Joseph Callelia and a considerable list of others.

Columbia

"The Wizard of Oz" has lost none of its wizardry. L. Frank Baum's book has been transferred to the Technicolor screen with a cast of stars, a town of midgets, modern tinkly tunes, and all the verve and excitement which you cherished when you read the book as a child. The Columbia boasts it this week.

Judy Garland is Dorothy, with the ruby slippers; Ray Bolger, the Scarecrow; Jack Healy, the Tin Woodsman, and Bert Lahr the Cowardly Lion. Seeking respectively a home, a heart, a brain and courage, they seek out the Wizard of Oz in the magic Emerald City and though he is no one but Frank Morgan, he manges to change them all into that which they would be.

Especially fine color effects are obtained with a field of poppies, and in such isolated handlings as the "horse of a different color." While the story may drag a bit for adults, the sheer beauty of the sets and the antics of Lion Lahr will keep them from forgetting. It is recommended that you take the kiddies early, for the picture is long.

Notable is a short about freedom of the press, dating back to the early eighteenth century for its inspiration.

'Espionage Agent,' at the Earle, Crusades for Tightened Spy Laws

Joel McCrea Stars In Melodrama of Great Timeliness; 'College Daze' Revue

"ESPIONAGE AGENT." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Robert Henry Buckner, adapted to the screen by Warren Duff, Michael Fessier and Frank Donoghue, costarring Joel McCrea and Brenda Marshall, with Jeffrey Lynn, George Bancroft, Stanley Ridges, James Stephenson, Howard Hickman, Martin Kosleck, Nana Bryant, Robert O. Davis, Hans von Twardowsky, Addison Richards, Lucien Prival and Edwin Stanley. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

In watching the unreeling of "Espionage Agent," on the screen at the Earle Theater, one gathers the impression that this Warner Brothers melodrama of the United States State Department and its field forces in a grim tussle with well-organized foreign spy systems, sacrificed a large measure of its inherent dramatic substance to an impatient lust for headline timeliness. The story is tossed together in sketchy fashion, employs the obvious and time-honored devices of the "cops-and-robbers" type of thriller and reaches its objective by leaps and bounds that are frequently no more convincing than they are easily followed.

BELL

The story harks back to the terrorism of 1915 for a reminder that in times of war there are methods of enemy attack that are more surreptitious and more sinister than the advance of heavily armed columns of soldiery. They lie in the malevolent machinations of the forces that wear no uniforms and wield espionage, sabotage, civilian infiltration and other forms of treason as their most potent weapons. In other countries, the members of this hidden army are dealt with drastically and summarily. In America they are permitted to operate from behind the protective shield of the "freedom" of a patient people. It is this condition that "Espionage Agent" sets out to attack—and does attack with as much vigor as the tawdy quality of its content will allow.

Has a New Background

The State Department, by the revelations of this subject, now follows in the footsteps of the Department of Justice, the Navy Department, the Treasury Department and other major branches of the Federal establishment, as a laboratory in which the fabricators of fictional propaganda may concoct their patriotic potions. There are intervals in its action when "Espionage Agent" becomes momentarily authentic and intensely interesting. There are a greater number of others, however, during which it fails utterly to live up to the dignity and importance of the valuable service it has undertaken to render the country in a time of emergency.

Joel McCrea and Jeffrey Lynn are cast as young "career men"—the picture originally was called "Career Man"—serving in a North African consulate. There they come upon a young American girl, or she comes upon them, who seems to be in a desperate plight. She gains their attention and help through sheer subterfuge, prompted by the shrewd heads of a spy ring with which she has become involved as a means of staving off starvation. She marries Barry Corvall, who would be Mr. McCrea, and ably assists him in being fired from his post when her connection with the undercover agents is disclosed. It is a little difficult to determine at times which side this Brenda Ballard is on. In the end, however, she turns up under the red, white and blue, after she and her husband as private citizens have turned up the evidence that saves the Nation.

Joel McCrea and Jeffrey Lynn strive earnestly to make their characters ring at least partially true, but it is a slight uphill task—unless the State Department operates differently than I think. Brenda Marshall, in the role of Brenda Ballard, might have made a more auspicious cinema than in her present assignment and George Bancroft is largely wasted in a minor role. Stanley Ridges, James Stephenson, Martin Kosleck, Hans von Twardowsky and Lucien Prival battle valiantly for their native lands and the redemption of a faulty script.

Diversified Stage Bill

The "College Daze" stage revue, originally designed as a living accompaniment of "What a Life," the scholastic comedy that stepped back a week to make way for "Espionage Agent," is diversified and diverting. In place of Garfield Swift, "the find of the month," laid low by illness in New York, Lysbeth Hughes appears as the featured vocalist and scores emphatically in a group of established ballads—"Night and Day," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "Begin the Beguine," and the like. Morton and Denison, a dancing songstress and an instrumental comic, create fun on both sides of the footlights and so does Whitey Roberts. Freddie Craig, jr., injects a little more humor than usual into one of those blackboard acts in which he writes "backwards, upside down and backwards and backwards," etc. The Roxyettes, in the meantime, are happily all over the place in a variety of fetching routines.

A Grantland Rice-Ted Husing Sportlight "Catching Whoppers" in the big fish waters; a Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy, "The Little Lion Hunter," and the Paramount News supplement a feature that was in a little too much of a hurry.

Dummy Is Model For Pretty Legs

Fourteen pairs of the most beautiful legs in Hollywood made their camera debut in the fashion-show sequence of "The Women," starring Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell. And these 28 legs had, as their model, those of no less personage than the famous dummy, Cynthia, well known in New York society circles.

The leg measurements are as follows: ankle, 8 inches; calf, 11½ inches; knee, 12 inches; upper leg, 19½ inches.

Clinton Band and "Sherlock Holmes" Film Both Excite Audience

"THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Edwin Blum and William Drake, based on the play "Sherlock Holmes," by William Gillette, with Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Ida Lupino, Alan Marshall, Terry Kilburn, George Zucco, Henry Stephenson, E. E. Clive, Arthur Hohl, May Beatty, Peter Willes, Mary Gordon, Holmes Herbert, Mary Forbes, Frank Dawson, William Austin and Anthony Kemble Cooper. Directed by Alfred Werker. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Jitters and jitterbugs strive for dominance in the current Capitol Theater entertainment. The swing of Larry Clinton, creator of the "Dipsy-Doodle" provides the jitterbug element; the uncanny death screams and homicides of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" provide the audience with pleasing jitters.

Larry Clinton, one of the most personable of the country's "big name" band leaders, serves up a fine dish of jam and jive. He leads with a dynamic trombone, part of the time, but mostly he wields a highly nervous baton. His top successes, "Dipsy-Doodle" and the contrasting "My Reverie" (neatly abstracted from Debussy) naturally lead off the act. Also highly appreciated by the customers was Larry's newest, "I Want a Hat Wit' Cherries" which will probably be blasting forth from every bandstand in the country in a few weeks. Plenty of tricky brass and a neatly following, but not too obtrusive, bass and drums seem to be the Clinton formula. It worked out especially well in a clever arrangement of "I Get a Kick Out of You." Another hot interlude was the jam quartet using the piano, bass, guitar and drums.

A Streamlined Hit

Singer Mary Dugan clicked beautifully in combination with the Clintonians. She's a streamlined lass, both personally and in performance. Singing effortlessly but artfully, she scored so smashingly in "I Want a Hat Wit' Cherries" and "Always Near To Me" that the visiting high school element not only paddy-whacked their palms but tossed in a lot of shrill whistles. As a final encore she sang "Over the Rainbow" more beautifully than it has been done before in this town at any spot.

Also in the stage show was Shavo Sherman, whose impersonations of a dozen or so big stage and screen personages reaped heavy applause. Shavo's principal make-up was an assortment of hats, though he used a putty nose for Jimmy Durante and some sticking plaster to achieve Groucho Marx's moustache and eyebrows. Dancers Jack and June Blair, a pair of nice young people, gamboled prettily. The Titan trio converted acrobatics into a true plastic art, not only by amazing muscular skill, but a beautiful sense of rhythm.

Fine Escapist Drama

"The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" falls into the realm of pure escapist entertainment. Basil Rathbone, as the great Sherlock, is very nearly overtopped by the quaint and appealing asininity of Nigel Bruce, as the good Dr. Watson.

From a very sketchy recollection of the Sherlock stories, it seems to us that a couple of them have combined to give high thrill to this charade. Anyway, wicked Prof. Moriarity pits his wits against Sherlock in an effort to steal nothing less than England's crown jewels, and very nearly succeeds. By way of distracting Sherlock from the main crime objective, the professor pretends that he is going to lift the famed "Star of Delhi," greatest emerald in the world and also murders a harmless young man. The professor is very thorough. He's such a clever fellow that you're almost sorry when Sherlock pitches him off the Tower of London.

The acting is uniformly good throughout. Ida Lupino, only distaff member of the cast, registers distress with great sincerity. In fact, her screams were so convincing yesterday that a couple of jitterbugs down front added a couple of shrieks of their own, to the great diversion of the audience.

A color cartoon, "The Giant With Two Heads," proved carefree and bright—adjectives that can well be applied to the whole show.

MARY HARRIS.

Garbo Hikes Back From Outdoor Set

Followed by a studio car containing her maid, hairdresser and wardrobe, Garbo recently walked a mile and a quarter from the railroad station on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Lot Two to the sound stage where the "Ninotchka" set awaited her.

The day's work on the picture started in the railway station, showing the heroine's arrival in Paris, then all equipment and the company moved inside.

Garbo chose to walk and enjoy the sunshine. The chauffeur driving the car following her clocked her. She did the walk in 14 minutes flat.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 22.—With everyone thinking, fearing and writing about war, I might as well let off steam—I'm steaming, anyway; it's the hottest day we've ever had—and give out my 2 cents' worth. I'm firmly convinced that the only way we'll keep America out of war is through women. And that can be done only if we organize at once, head our committee with some of our greatest peace-loving citizens, like Barney Baruch, Jesse Jones and Herbert Hoover. Let our sons know we don't believe they're cowards when they refuse to fight another's battle. I don't know anyone who really wants to go to war; it's fear of ridicule that drives men into the trenches. Let's stay home and prepare a defense so strong no one will dare attack us, so that when they've made another hash of Europe we can give what's left of civilization a shelter and new hope.

HOPPER

While Charlie Laughton was working on location as the "Hunchback" to the tune of 120 degrees, he kept singing: "Mad Dogs and Englishmen Go Out in the Mid-Day Sun."

By the time they finish relakes on "The Thin Man" they'll practically have remade the whole picture. It was written two years ago. A long time to keep any story fresh.

In case you've wondered what became of Michael Whelan—he's in Milbrook, Conn., playing in "Death Takes a Holiday" and goes to Broadway this winter.

David Niven wonders how many years we'll remember him. Forever, Davie; you've made a place in our hearts no one can fill.

Happy to hear Hazel Hayes, one of the Wampus Baby Stars, has made an enormous success in opera in St. Louis. Here, they said she had no sex appeal. St. Louis thought differently.

Hope "The Road Back" is just that for Larry Blake, John King and Dick Cromwell, who are all at Universal making retakes for that picture. All three have done little on the screen since then; so let's hope this is the road back for them.

Was sorry to hear Benny Rubin didn't get the comedy part in "The Fighting 69th." To me, he's one of our best comics. But they thought his test was too Park Avenue-ish. Imagine! 'Twould be like telling George Raft his accent was too British for the Gas House Gang!

Arthur Lake and his neighbors love their postman. So when his car broke down they got together and bought him a new one. Proving that postman won't have to ring twice.

Jerry Colona and Bing Crosby are now life members of National Barber Shop Quartet Association. Other members include Jim Farley and 39 Governors. Learn to sing if you want to make the political grade this year.

Don't be surprised if Hedy Lamarr's shelved picture, "I Take This Woman," isn't dusted off and they begin remaking it. At least, Spencer Tracy has been in conference on it. But Spencer won't talk.

Is it too soon after his death to remind you that it was Samuel Insull, who brought Edison's electric light bulb within the reach of all? To Insull, it was his greatest achievement.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 22 (INS).—"I Take This Woman," the Hedy Lamarr-Spencer Tracy mistake that cost Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer so much money that no one ever discusses it, will be remade. Woody Van Dyke will be given an entirely different story. In that, he gets a better break than Frank Borzage, a swell director, who didn't even have a script. Brozage will be busy on "Not Too Narrow; Not Too Deep"—the Clark Gable-Joan Crawford drama.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Many of Borzage's shots, of course, will be utilized, but the unbelievable portions of the story will be discarded. The salvaging of "I Take This Woman" is the first step in M-G-M's economy drive and if a good story can be retrieved, M-G-M will have acted wisely in trying to save the fortune sunk in it. "Northwest Passage," Spence's last picture, was reviewed at Pomona and my self-appointed critics there give it an "A" rating and call it a real adventure.

Hot weather to be thinking of work. Yet Zoe Akins isn't letting it interfere with her schedule. In addition to writing an adaptation of "Young Days," a play for Ray Goetz, she is interested in forming a production tie-up with Dorothy Arzner, the screen's only woman director. They have united with Jack Skirball and will probably produce three for Columbia. In that number is Sinclair Lewis' "Angela Is 22" and "The Trojan Pony," Zoe's own play, a sequel to "The Greeks Had a Word for It." "Young Days" is an adaptation of "The Happy Days," a book by Claude Pujet. Zoe has long wanted to get into the production end as well as the writing and it will be interesting to see the Akins-Arzner productions, which will, of course, have the woman's touch.

One consoling thought in the present heat wave and filmland's worry over the European market comes from Universal City. This company, once considered the weak sister of the business, is actually so busy that "The Invisible Man Returns," the H. G. Wells sequel, has to wait to go into production until there is a sound stage available. At this moment "Destry Rides Again," "First Love" (Deanna Durbin), "Little Accident," "Tower of London," "Green Hill," several Westerns and a serial are all shooting. As soon as "The Tower of London" is okayed the Wells thriller will get going with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Vincent Price, Nan Grey and John Sutton in the cast and Joe May directing.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Harry Ritzes planed to New York, called by the serious illness of Mrs. Ritz's father; Baby Leroy (Lonnie to you) has had his tonsils yanked in preparation for that new movie career; Barbara Bennett Downey and her five children arrived today. Since Joan was working, Sally Eilers met them with a station wagon, limousine and roadster; Joan Crawford in a thin wool dress of biscuit color and turban to match embroidered in red was the smartest dressed woman at the Gladys Parker fashion parade. Miss Parker used to be a cartoonist and she acted as one of the models in her own parade. So did Bobby Fidler who said she was scared to death; Jeanette MacDonald in a thin chiffon dress looked the coolest of anyone there.

Unless Dorothy Lamour is putting on an act she is very serious about Robert Preston who came with her to the show; Bob Hope acted as master of ceremonies and was very funny; the Maharajah Manikya Bahadur, who sent engraved invitations to a cocktail soiree at the Ambassador, has canceled his party. There goes my date with royalty; Burns and Allen are writing their radio skits in the swimming pool; Patricia Morison is now occupying Clara Bow's old dressing room at Para; Brenda Marshall has bought herself a new car—she must have had a raise.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The various forms of dunking have been the subject of treatises, radio skits and movie shorts, but the daddy of all dunking experiences is reserved for the fellow who gets behind the wheel of a President's Cup boat. He's apt to get himself killed.

POVICH

In their search for speed on the water, the Gold Cup drivers have been crowding their craft with engine and whittling down the hulls for streamline effects to the extent that the up-to-date Gold Cup boat combines all the essentials of a death-trap for the inept pilot. And even the capable driver is always prepared to jump for his life.

That's the secret of keeping body and soul together when the mechanical monster begins to take leave of the water before turning turtle. It may be the high marine code for the pilot to stay with the ship, but with speedboat pilots, it's folly. The fellow who stays with an uncontrollable boat may not live to tell the tale. Barring a miracle he si (1) crushed to death or (2) dragged to death

It's no certainty, either, that he's going to survive even if he is thrwon clear or jumps clear of his craft, because when you take leave of a boat that is moving along at 70 or 80 miles an hour, you are flying, brother, and the impact when you hit the water is not at all gentle. That's what happened to Bill Freitag, pilot of the Miss Philadelphia in the President's Cup regatta ten years ago. He was thrown clear of the boat and hit the water with such force that his life belt was torn from him by the impact and he was stunned, with fatal consequences.

Doesn't Want Any Part of Driving 'Em

Mr. C. W. Leveau, former designer of the famed Horace Dodge line of speedboats, who is now a naval architect in the Government service, says frankly that he quit piloting speedboats because the boats go too fast. "Even in the last five years, there has been a tremendous increase in speed, perhaps too much," says Mr. Leveau.

"Back in 1934 I drove the Edandy to a new record in the Virginia Gold Cup race. My speed was 44 miles an hour, a world record for the 225-cubic-inch class. That record is now 85 miles an hour, almost doubled. Pop Cooper set it this summer with his Tops II, a boat that weighed only 700 pounds, 500 pounds lighter than mine. I design boats, but I want no part of driving 'em at that speed.

He had the hardly delightful experience of being dragged under water for 700 feet by a runaway boat a few years ago and counts himself lucky to have survived. "We were making a trial run in Detroit when the boat got away from us, and Bill Martin, who jumped for it, was killed by the impact. I was lucky. My foot caught in the spokes of the wheel and ordinarily that should have been the worst thing that could happen to me. The boat turned over and I had a 700-foot ride under water, before the thing righted itself. It wasn't any fun."

"Torque" Causes the Boat to Capsize

Something that the boat people call "torque" causes a speed boat to capsize, according to Leveau. "It's a sort of centrifugal force, the propeller action against the speed of the boat, that causes a terrific pull either to port or starboard. When the torque is too heavy, over you go and the least you can get is a ducking.

"No driver likes to leave his boat. He's always trying to right it until the last minute. And it's the smart driver who knows when to give up the ship. The fellow who is too brave is apt to get badly hurt. Figure it out for yourself.

"This busines sof torque—the natural pull to one side or the other caused by the propeller action—troubles airplanes, too. But the boat people are trying to beat it. It helps if we can get the propeller turning a heap faster than the motor. Herbert Mendelsohn's propeller on his Notre Dame turns 5,600 revolutions per minute but his motor makes only 4,500, and that's a help."

The boat people are getting smarter, too, about their life belts. They learned by bitter experience that the strongest life belt can't stand the terrific impact resulting from spills in the upper-bracket speed. These days their lif bits ar strapped on lik parachutes, buckled not only across the back and shoulders, but under the arms and legs as well.

Two Chief Requisites of Boat-Owning

Just to give you an idea of the terrific strain on boat and engine at high speeds, there have been cases when the pull of the propeller actually sucked the screws out of the planking of boats with results that were not exactly happy.

There are two chief requisites of boat-owning Gold Cup drivers, (1) a better than fair share of courage and (2) a lot of money in the bank. No naval architect will even design you a Gold Cup boat for less than $5,000 and it may cost you $40,000 to put a boat in the water. Mendelsohn paid that much merely for the motor for his Notre Dame, which will be seen in action on the Potomac today. It's a 24-cylinder Duesenberg, with one of its features a supercharger that cost $10,000.

A connecting rod repair job on a motor like that is apt to run you $10,000, and you can replace your pistons at $96 per, or, roughly, $2,000 if you desire a new set of pistons. And the special sort of gas required for Gold Cup racing will set you back one buck per gallon. Bub, bring me them oars.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 22.—Baseball, which likes to call itself the national game, makes it necessary for a fan to have about as much money as the national deficit about this time each year. Box seats for the World Series are to be $6.60 again, and the good, bad and indifferent grandstand reserved seats $5.50 a head. In addition, the tickets must be purchased in strips of three, a pretty discredited racket by this time.

CONSIDINE

If you live in New York, for instance, you must buy tickets for the first, second and sixth games, your last $5.50 or $6.60 to be refunded if there is no sixth game. In Cincinnati the fans were informed that box seats would cost $6.60 but that none would be put on sale because they would be held for regular customers and officials, and, inevitably, speculators.

The Yankees will insist that no fewer than four strips of box seat tickets be sold to each customer. Every person who thus steps up to the box seat grille must produce a minimum of $79.20 in order to walk away with a pasteboard. You could buy the Philly outfield for that.

Now, we have seen a lot of World Series games which weren't worth the price of a free ladies' day ticket. There have been some games of inestimable value, too, of course. But by and large we'd be inclined to believe that World Series baseball is a little worse than good brisk seasonal baseball. The reason for this is that invariably there are one or two players on every team who blow up under the strain.

Not Enough Novelty for the Money

A series' chief charm, of course, is the novelty of seeing the champ of one league playing the champ of the other lodge. But that novelty doesn't seem to me to warrant this annual jacking of the prices.

There must be thousands of regular customers who keep the baseball pot boiling during the regular season by buying seats from 50 cents to a buck-ten, but who are forced to abstain from seeing World Series each year. It doesn't seem quite fair, or even sound business—even though the big Yankee Stadium will be just about sold out October 4 and 5.

And as long as we are passing along suggestions which will be enthusiastically ignored by the big leagues' new ideas department, headed, I understand, by two progressive youngsters named Connie Mack and Clark Griffith, it seems to me that it is high time to draw a clearer line between the earnings of the winners and the earnings of the losers. There's not enough difference. In recent years the winners' share has been something like $3,000 and the losers in the neighborhood of $3,500.

Brenda Frazier Will Get the Air

It's a cinch that those National League representatives, who curl up and contentedly die when the Yanks start clubbing the ball, would fight back a little more fiercely if they knew that they had a chance to make four or five thousand dollars more per man by winning. As it stands now, it satisfies them just to get in the series, for they know that they'll get almost as much as the Yanks do no matter how badly they're beaten.

Brenda Frazier, who has asked that her name not be mentioned in the New York newspapers, except the Mirror, News, Times, Trib, Journal-American, Sun, Post and World-Telegram, is soon going to be run right out of the glamour girl league, according to a handsomely engraved threat from Ted Deglin, who is currently tub-thumping for the annual Garden rodeo. Seems that the feature of this year's cattle convention will be eight Texas debutantes, daughters of wealthy ranch owners. They'll ride the lone pray-ree at Madison Square Garden each night, not for vulgar money but for fancy saddles for their own tack rooms. And if you don't think they are bona fide debs, one of them, Elizabeth Miller, clean from Fluvanna, Tex., owns the Open-A-Bar Ranch, a name that will strike a responsive chord in the chests of every saloon-going New York deb.

Cincinnati Gains a Half Game in Hot Race; Big Rally Aids Leaders in Nightcap

By the Associated Press

Cincinncati, Sept. 22.—The Reds went three games up in the National League pennant race today, sweeping a twin bill from Pittsburgh, 6 to 0 and 10 to 9, while the second-place Cardinals nosed out Chicago, 3 to 2, in a single contest.

The first was a breeze for Rookie Gene Thompson in chalking up his tenth victory of the year. Wally Berger helped win the second on his third-inning home run with the sacks loaded.

After playing errorless ball in the opener, the Reds' inner defense and St. Louis, Sept. 22 (AP).—Two freshman pitchers, Morton Cooper and Bob Bowman, combined today to stop Slugging Hank Leiber cold and give the fighting St. Louis Cardinals an all-importan' 3 to 2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

As it was, the Cardinals, although winning, fell back in their pursuit of the league-leading Cincinnati Reds, who took a double-header from Pittsburgh. The Reds now are three games ahead of the onrushing Cardinals.

Leiber, who has been hitting like a house afire for the Cubs, came up three times with chances to drive in runs and failed each time. Twice he hit into double plays.

'Unprecedented' Calm Mars President's Cup Regatta

By Jack Munhall.

Because of the extraordinary calm of the Potomac River, most of the speed trails which annually produce the bulk of records established in the President's Cup Regatta were canceled yesterday i nwhat officials said was a move "unprecedented in regatta history."

This action was takn almost immediately after Fred Jacoby had posted the day's only mark by zipping his class B professional boat over a measured mile course at an average of 53.49 miles per hour.

Oddly, the decision of the drivers to put off their record seeking runs was prompted by advice from Fred Jacoby's brother, Emil, acknowledged to be one of the best mechanics in the business and known as a friend of all speedboat pilots.

In explaining the cancellation, Aubrey Bogley, regatta racing committee chairman, said:

"When the water is as calm as it was this morning the speed of the boats is retarded by what is known as skin friction between their bottoms and the water. Hydroplanes always make better time when there are ripples."

Coincidence: In the amateur midget class the three Defibaugh sisters, Frances, 15, Betty, 16, and Irene, 18, finished in the order of their ages. They were seventh, eighth and ninth, respectively.

Followers of that demon Kansas City ace, Fred (Pop) Cooper, will be interested to know that the

Ralph Bogart Wins District Amateur Golf

Billy Shea Beaten, 3 and 2, in Finals At Burning Tree Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Bogart

Bogart, tourney medalist with a 74, became the second youngest champion in the 25 years, and the 19-year-old Wilson High School student, received the trophy from the first champion and a member of the Post Club, Walter R. Tuckerman. Bobby Brownell, who won the title at the age of 16 in 1936, was the youngest titleholder.

Bogart played one over par golf in the finals, but he threw three 3's and a birdie four at Shea in the middle of the round that turned the match from an even battle to a virtual rout.

All even playing the 8th, Bogart won the hole when Shea was trapped, and after halving the ninth in birdies, the new champion knocked a great brassie shot within inches of the pin on the tenth hole for a conceded eagle and a two up lead. He made it three on the 11th when his chip shot rimmed the cup for a birdie and Shea was trapped, and held the margin through the 16th.

But Shea had little room for complaint, as he was a 100-to-1 shot not to reach the finals after trailing Claude Rippy by two holes in the semi-finals, with that many to go. After winning the seventeenth with a fine approach and putt, when it looked as though he would lose it, Shea birdied the eighteenth by dropping an eight-footer, and won the nineteenth with a par when Rippy was in the rough and couldn't reach the green in two.

Bogart took advantage of a chipping and putting lapse on the part of Volney Burnett to win 2 and 1 in the morning, before dashing

Detroit Eleven Wins Opener, 20-7

Detroit, Sept. 22 (AP).—The University of Detroit overpowered Central Michigan Teachers, 20 to 7, tonight in its first 1939 grid game before 21,500 spectators.

Detroit made a 67-yard march for a touchdown early in the first period. Bill Schauer scoring from the five on an end around play, and Frank Hayes converting from placement. After a pass interception halted Detroit momentarily in the third, Al Ghesquiere plunged over from the two and Hayes converted again.

Cup Boats Vie In President's Race Today

A.P.B.A. Championships And 135 Events Also On Regatta Program

Gold Cup boats, 225's and 135's hold the spotlight in the regatta today and last night opinions were a dime a dozen as the boat enthusiasts hashed over the much talked of races.

In the President's Cup race, two heats of which will be run off today, it seemed likely that Zal Simmons' My Sin might repeat her Gold Cup victory of the Detroit races a couple of weeks ago.

Both My Sin and Herb Mendelson's Notre Dame were tested yesterday and observers last night considered that My Sin had the speed to win. It was pointed out that Notre Dame, completely rebuilt since she won the President's Cup in 1937, was well built—so well constructed in fact that its weight will hinder if the water is as calm today as it was yesterday.

May Upset the Dope

On the other hand, if the water happens to be rough the Mendelson craft, with Dan Arena at the controls, may upset the Simmons boat which set a new American record at Detroit. Arena is noted for his nerve when the going is tough.

L. J. Fageol also took his So Long out on the course. All three boats had to have carburetor adjustments because the Potomac is so near sea level.

Why Worry, owned by W. E. Cantrell, of Louisville, is at the Navy Yard, but it was not taken out for a trial. The owner probably will give it a trial at an early hour this morning.

Two other Gold Cup boats, Harold Wilson's Miss Canada III and E. T. Chase's Artic Turn, are expected in early this morning.

Jack (Pop) Cooper, who himself heads the entry list in the 225 A. P. B. A. championships, rode in both My Sin and So Long during the trials yesterday.

When asked what he thought of their speed, he said:

"Well I'll tell you, if I had had my

Boat Builder, College Boy Split Honors

Jacoby, Leading Pro, Gets 2,578 Points; Ferguson, Amateur, Compiles 2,869

By Ken Harter.

Fred Jacogy, the North Bergen, N. J., boat manufacturer, and Clint Ferguson, of Waban, Mass., a Hobart College junior, monopolized the outboard races opening the three-day power boat section of the President's Cup Regatta yesterday on the Potomac. Almost 100 pleasure craft lined the course besides the many spectators who watched from various points along Hains Point.

Ferguson, th eleading amateur outboard driver in the United States, triumphed in Classes A and B—sweeping both heats in each event—and would have made a sweep of all the events as he did at Fort Worth last week, when he took four out of the five races, if he hadn't had motor trouble in the first heat of the Class C event. However, by winning the second heat he placed second in the event.

Scores 2,869 Points

Altogether he chalked up 2,869 points which will be added to his yearly total for the amateur championship.

Jacoby, who is trying to retain his title ranking in the U. S. Professional Sweepstakes division, added 2,578 points to his total yesterday.

The crowning point in an otherwise mediocre day came late in the afternoon when it was learned that Margie, driven by Ernie Call, of Willoughby, Ohio, had been disqualified after winning the Class A professional race, because the boat was three pounds under weight.

This helped Jacoby to dominate with the same consistency as Ferguson. He was given credit for winning the Class A event, and also made a sweep of the Class B professional event.

This race was marred when Donald Garner, of Toledo, Ohio, who finished second in the first heat of this event, capsized at the far turn. He was thrown about 30 feet into the water. One of the Coast Guard patrol boats picked him up and after an examination it was reported that he had suffered nothing more than shock.

Record Established

Only one record was established yesterday and that was set by Jacoby when he broke the existing one-mile record with a performance of 53.492 in a trial heat. The old record was 52.86.

After dominating their respective classes all day, Ferguson and Jacoby met in one of the final races of the day—the Class F open event. The Hobart Junior won the first heat, while Jacoby came in second. In the final heat, Ferguson finished second and Jacoby third. Ken McKenzie of New Haven, upset the dope by taking first.

Ferguson started out the day as though he might repeat his sweep of last week. The Hobart College junior took the lead at the first turn of the initial heat of the Class A amateur event and won by a margin of almost 25 lengths. Earl Hildebrand, of Richmond, was his nearest competitor and William Gartbergh, of Far Rockaway, N. Y., finished third.

Two Bits Takes Lead

Although the second and final heat finished in the exact order of the first, the thrills for the spectators were a few more. On the first lap Hildebrand, who was driv-

Southeastern Urges a Ban On 'Freshmen Snatching'

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Sept. 22.—Strong sentiment for action to curb the "vicious" practice of "freshman snatching" by football rivals developed today among Southeastern Conference college presidents.

After lengthy discussion, the conference executive committee called on college presidents of the 13-member athletic group to "seriously consider" the question at the December meeting in New Orleans.

Action by the committee followed introduction of he problem by Dr. James F. Broussard, faculty chairman of athletics at Louisiana State University.

Under present conference rules a freshman may transfer from one school to another without loss of eligibility up to the time he participates in a freshman athletic contest.

"I would like to have this committee take cognizance of a practice now going on and termed by sports writers 'freshman snatching,'" said Dr. Broussard. "We have been a victim. I know it is being practiced and I know it's a vicious thing.

"There has got to be an executive order and a drastic one."

"This situation," said faculty Chairman N. W. Dougherty, of Tennessee, "is not indigenous to this section, but is being practiced the country over. We have come to expect our coaches to win and if we expect them to win they're going to get athletes."

Bull Whip, Farnsworth Beaten Out

Thrilling Finish One Of Greatest Seen; Victor Pays $6.90; Runs Fastest Time

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md. Sept. 22.—In a dog-eat-dog finish, a turf thriller if there ever was one, Sun Egret, in the colors of the A. C. C. Stable, gained a camera decision in the Prospect Handicap, featuring today's program. With the Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip and the Tall Trees Stable's Bill Farnsworth, Sun Egret went into the imaginary wire as straight as a string, as the horsemen say, and the winner by a nose.

Few in the crowd of 7,000 would hazard a guess as to which of the three was the winner before the numbers were posted. The chart callers and judges looked at one another and shook their heads. It was Sun Egret on the rail, Bull Whip in the middle and Bill Farnsworth on the outside, all under the hardest kind of drives.

Sun Egret, smallest horse in the field of five and carrying top weight of 124 pounds, paid his host of backers a $6.90 mutuel and ran the six furlongs in 1:11 3-5, the fastest time of the meeting. Sun Egret previously had annexed the Susquehanna Handicap in a return to best form.

The race was one of joy, then gloom and lastly joy for the backers of the game little son of Sun Briar. With Jockey Al Shelhamer in the saddle, Sun Egret got away in front and set a strong pace with Bull Whip and Bill Farnsworth ready to take advantage of any tendency of the leading colt to tire.

Johnny Gilbert took Bill Farnsworth off the rail leaving the backstretch and sent him to the outside. Bull Whip, placed to a hard drive by Jockey Mannie Berg, came up on even terms with Sun Egret as the leaders went into the stretch. Sun Egret backers groaned a moment later when Bull Whip forged to the front. But Sun Egret was not through. He rallied under the whip and came up on the rail to get on even terms with Bull Whip.

The pair were locked in a thrilling duel when along came Bill Faarnsworth on the outside, answering Jockey Gilbert's urging.

Post's Football Contest Draws Record Response

The entry deadline for the first in a series of weekly football guessing contests offered by The Post expired at 11 o'clock last night when the last of an unprecedented number of entries left the department virtually wading in letters.

The contest editors are working overtime in their efforts to group the entries awaiting this afternoon's results and if possible the five winners of a pair of tickets to the Redskins-Giant football game October 1 will be announced Monday.

Next week's contest will begin with the Tuesday edition of The Post when a new blank will be printed.

Hebrew Bowling Loop Will Begin on Tuesday

Opening activity in the Hebrew Bowling League will take place Tuesday at Convention Hall when 16 teams, the league limit, start rolling 'em at 10 p. m. A full handicap system will be used, avoiding the possibility of one team or another holding a wide edge. Team captains will meet at the alleys at 8 p. m. prior to the matches.

Seek Grid Game

Ballston Skulls, undefeated in a stiff 1938 grid schedule, are seeking out-of-town games for Sundays. A local team may arrange a practice game for tomorrow by calling Oxford 1196.

BLABLAH, first away, set pace under hustling tactics and weakened gradually after being caught. FERNBRAKE, slow to begin, gained steadily and closed willingly under intermittent punishment. DULIE was rushed to contention on inside approaching turn and faltered in closing stages.

Daily Double, BARRE GRANITE and NANSEMOND, Paid $12.90.

BRIGHT VIEW wore down NICKY to get to front leaving backstretch and drew out to win opening a gap. NICKY was hard used while setting and pressing pace and weakened, but held LA SOMBRA safe. The latter, slow to begin, came wide for racing room and closed a gap in final 3 furlongs. PHARA SUPREME broke poorly, came between horses and, under rushing tactics to reach contention, hung nearing end.

DOROTHY POMP went up on inside to be closest to pace and held on gamely to show good effort. PHARA BELLE was off sluggishly and closed some ground.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. The Prospect Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:31½. Winner, A. C. C. SUN EGRET, first out of gates and saving ground while holding lead over BULL WHIP, lost lead midway of stretch, but rallied when shaken up and was up in concluding stride. BULL WHIP forced SUN EGRET'S pace, went to front in stretch under hard drive and fought it out gamely to end. BILL FARNSWORTH raced on outside of leaders, came wide entering stretch and was wearing down leaders under good handling at finish.

WESTCHESTER assumed command in run to first turn, drew clear of KAI-MIN and held it way thereafter under energetic handling. TUTTICURIO was keen forward factor from start and held on willingly, but could not menace winner seriously. CANGRIERRON came with good courage at close.

At The Post

Dear Al:

While Challedon and Eight Thirty are conspicous by their absence in the $10,000 added Potomac Handicap, week-end feature here, is bubbling over with speed. The field of eight should provide a sizzling race as Racing Secretary Charles McClennan seems to have distributed the weights well. Unerring, Third Degree and Heatherbroom are likely to draw a strong play while El Chico, reappearing in this State after a long absence, will get some attention. It wasn't a little bird who told me that Bob Considine had the right dope on the line-up for the Pimlico special. The artist who is making the sporty invitations has orders to make up invites for owners of Kayak II and Cravat as well as Challedon, Johnstown and Eight Thirty, already named by the Maryland Jockey Club. I don't know what becomes of the fines paid by jockeys but I do know where they should go. This money should be used to defray the hospital expenses of injured jockeys, including the $200 pasted on Charlie Friedman here this week, the fines of riders this year amount to a tidy sum. Jockey Buddy Root, still abed at Washington's Emergency Hospital, is the kind of boy who could use some of that money. Eight jockeys hurt, one jockey killed is the score on Maryland tracks this year. As far as I have been able to learn, not an official penny has found its way back to these boys. There ought to be a law. I guess it can be told now. At one of the half-milers this summer, a certain jockey lost his whip early in a race. At the time this horse was right up with the leaders but when the whipping stopped, the horse dropped back. As he was drifting through the field, our hero became side by side with another boy. "Say friend, how about lending me your whip, you aren't going to get anything anyway?" The other boy replied, "Sure pal. Here take it." With the second whip in action our hero went on to win.

Bill.

Selections at Havre de Grace

First race—To Town was away poorly in her recent New York race but closed gamely to get fourth place behind She Did. She demonstrated her early foot in a previous outing and should have it all her own way here. Counsello has class but late form is poor. Bubbleworth is a half-miler with a good chance.

Second race—King Pharamond, a one time star of the handicap division, drops into a claiming event after a poor New England season. His class should carry him home in front. Saxonby was second running for allowances in New England and appears next best. Miss Happy is ready to give a good account of herself.

Third race—Glorious Time set the pace in the junior championship stakes at Aqueduct, ran the first six furlongs in 1:12 flat, and wound up in third place. Gala Belle, a superior mudder, was second to Victory Morn at Narragansett and will be the one to beat. Annie Alone for the show.

Fourth race—Early Morn dropped a length decision to Ariel Toy earlier in the week and in previous races in New York was a consistent winner in class C handicaps. Has the edge in this event. Rehearsal won her last at Saratoga and should provide stiff contention. Sketch Book has a good money chance.

Fifth race—Third Degree came from last place to capture the Bay Shore Handicap at Aqueduct and equal the track record. The Greentree representative is known as a "fall horse" and is improving steadily. Unerring lost the Beldame Handicap by a nose in fast time and will be the one to beat. Porter's Mite gets a good figure on the dope.

Sixth race—Brooke Herod displayed consistent form among thhe better grade plates on the half-milers. The competition isn't much here and he should register. Building Trades could make trouble on his best effort but his last was not impressive. Woodwaac has a money chance in this field.

Seventh race—Kingsem was in trouble last start in New York where he received liberal betting support while racing with slightly better company. Man Dolt cut plenty of ice this spring then went sore. The best horse if he is sound. Victory Light closed ground behind cheap ones recently and may get up for a share.

Best bet—Glorious Time.

St. John's and Gonzaga Capture Opening Football Contests

Roosevelt, Anacostia Are Losers

Johnnies Win, 14-0, On Fumble and Pass; Purple Takes 18-6 Decision With Ease

Flashing midseason form in the first schoolboy grid games here this season, St. John's and Gonzaga elevens won impressive victories yesterday in preparation for their annual tangle in November.

The Johnnies, faced by a heavy and experienced Roosevelt club, took advantage of a recovered fumble and a beautiful long pass to forge a 14-0 victory on Roosevelt's home gridiron. Gonzaga took its opener with Anacostia's midget Indians to Central Stadium, winning an 18-6 decision with the aid of a pass over the goal line from the 28-yard line, a triple reverse and a 40-yard runback of a punt by Bob Mulvihill.

Besides proving what everyone knew already—that the two Catholic schools have the finest material in town—the games furnished indications that Roosevelt and Anacostia may not be as bad as expected. Anacostia well bottled as far as line gains were concerned, went into the air several times with surprising success. It's single goal resulted from such an expedition.

Roosevelt Plays Hard

Though held scoreless throughout, Roosevelt's Rough Riders for the first time in several years lived up to the "Rough" portion of their name. In their initial game under the instruction of Artie Boyd, former Eastern mentor, they took the field ready for a hard fight and left it with the purpose fulfilled.

The game had scarcely gotten underway when Bernie Kolker, husky Rider halfback, started a long series of fumbles by dropping the ball on St. John's 45. Frank Cady, after two tries at the line, matched Kolker's effort in the Johnnies' behalf. Dick Metzler, elongated Rider back, was unable to get through St. John's forward wall on two tries, so Kolker went back to kick.

Ball Bounces Over Goal

Then followed the most sustained drive of the game. Cady, easily the star of the Claret's attack, picked up two first downs in as many tries, bringing the ball to Roosevelt's 20. Tom Casare added another just over the 10. Two plays later Cady attempted to carry the mail over from the 4-yard line, but was hit so hard by Rider linemen that he again muffed. The ball bounded over the goal, and four Roosevelt stalwarts stood helplessly by while Joe Brogan pounced on it for a touchdown. Cady's placement was perfect.

Throughout the second period the teams battled without a score, Roosevelt showing the best gain with the advance to St. John's 9-yard stripe. Metzler backed off midway of the period and hurled to Danny Boothe, veteran wingman from the 28. It was knocked down. On the next try Boothe grabbed the ball and went for an 11-yard gain. The combination worked again a moment later, but the next heave of Metzler was intercepted by Joe Daly on the goal line and carried to the 23.

Another long drive by the Johnnies got them their other goal in the third session. A pass, Cady to Daly, which started on the Roosevelt 48, brought St. John's to the 15. From there it took three plunges to put the ball over, Cady plowing over from the 4.

Reserves Used Freely

In contrast to sparce substitutions in the St. John's-Roosevelt scrap, both Anacostia and Gonzaga used reserves freely. Nobody got anywhere along the ground the first period so the Indians went into the air as soon as the second session began. Art Faircloth, triple-threat star, tossed several times with little success until he hurled from the 30-yard line to his younger brother, Harris, over the goal. The latter grabbed it and sat down. Another pass, by the same combination, for the extra point, was wide.

Gonzaga's retaliation was almost an exact replica of Anacostia's score. Elmer Raba dropped a perfect aerial in the arms of Jim Costello from the 28-yard line. Jack Walsh's placement was blocked.

The third period proved Anacostia's undoing. Purple line plays started clicking with a vengeance and two quick touchdowns resulted. Johnny Scully, one of Coach Orrel Mitchell's reserves, took a reverse from Jack Walsh and galloped 30 yards through the whole Indian eleven for the first and winning goal. Healy's pass to Costello for the point was a trifle high.

With Anacostia backed against its own goal, the stage was set for Gonzaga's final touchdown. Faircloth kicked to Bob Mulvihill on the 40-yard line and the lanky Purple quarterback wiggled his way to 6 points behind brilliant blocking. Mulvihill and Raba paced the winners' punch, while Walsh and Healy stood out on the defense. Art Faircloth was Anacostia's class, the only teammate approaching him being Spencer, a tiny, shifty back.

First Grid Practice

Gibson Grays gridders will stage their first scrimmage of the season today at 2 p. m. at Madison School field, Falls Church. All players have been asked to attend.

St. John's Star Is Smothered, but Not for Long

Weill Guards Against Joey Being Injured

Al Weill, manager of Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald, yesterday took an important step toward keeping his boy intact for the title battle with Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, Thursday at Griffith Stadium when he announced that Joey would spar with only one fighter in public workouts.

"Spider" Armstrong, Canadian title claimant, was the man selected as the Archibald forces wound up training at Stillman's gym in New York and prepared to leave for Washington. Armstrong worked with the champion before the first fight was postponed several weeks ago due to Joey's cut eye. It was a colored sparmate, however, who caused the postponement when he accidentally clipped the champion above the eye with his elbow. Armstrong, according to Weill, has enough polish to avoid seriously damaging his man.

On the other side of the picture, Max Waxman, Jeffra's manager, yesterday branded as Weill's doings the talk about transferring the bout to Providence, R. I. He said he wanted the fight on neutral ground, and that he was sure of getting a square deal in Washington.

Manor Club Pin Team Is Winner

Manor Club No. 1, last year's winner, featured the opening of the 14-team Country Club bowling league at Lucky Strike last night with a three-game victory over Beaver Dam No. 1, last year's runner-up. Manor Captain Billy LaBille rolled 370 for high set and Earl McPhilomyx registered a 145 high game.

Manor scored also with a high team game of 658 and a high team set of 1812.

Miscellaneous No. 1 downed last year's titlists, B. M. Shop No. 1 in three sets as the 28 club Navy Yard league also opened at Lucky Strike. Newgent led the way with a high set of 373. A. Beavers rolled a season's record set of 394 as Tool No. 1 took three games from Gun Shop.

Washington Hockey Club Admitted to Eastern League

Five-Team Circuit to Play 3 Sections; Goals Will Ascertain Eventual Winner

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Eastern Amateur Hockey League will operate as a five-club circuit this season, with two new members, it was announced today after a meeting to prepare the 1939-40 schedule.

The Washington Eagles and the River Vale (N. J.) Golfers have been admitted to the league while the Hershey (Pa.) Cubs dropped out. The River Vale Club will play at a newly constructed rink in Bergen County. Other members will be the New York Rovers, Atlantic City Sea Gulls and Baltimore Orioles.

The season will open November 12 and a schedule of 56 games is planned. As it was last season, the campaign will be divided into three sections with three trophies at stake. The team which makes the highest total during the entire season will become league champion regardless of the outcome of the separate competitions for the Walker Trophy, the Hershey Cup and the Boardwalk Cup. Five Canadian teams will play each league member in an international series for the Hamilton B. Wills Trophy.

Third Straight Win Gives Bears 3-2 Cup Lead

Newark, N. J., Sept. 22.—The Newark Bears defeated Rochester for the third straight time before 9,448 here tonight, 4-1, to take a 3-2 lead in the final round of the International League playoffs. A Newark victory tomorrow night at Rochester will mean the Little World Series will start in Newark Tuesday night.

Joe Beggs, who had previously failed to last more than three innings in the Governor's Cup competition, was masterful tonight as he let the Wings down with five hits and pitched shut-out ball until the ninth, when Rochester tallied an unearned run.

The Bears got to Mike Ryba for 11 hits, they scored all their runs in the fourth. Mike Chartak doubled with the bases loaded and one out, scoring Blair, Judnich and Witek, who had singled. Chartak also counted when Abell's throw rolled into the dugout.

Tomorrow night at Rochester it will be George Washburn for the Bears, and Si Johnson for Rochester.

Midget Track Control Goes To Ray Alvis

Ray Alvis, former boxing promoter, manager and partner of Jack Dempsey, last night assumed control of the midget auto race track at New York avenue and Bladensburg road on a two-year lease with option to buy, it was announced by Capitol Speedway headquarters.

Alvis will take charge immediately. He will be in control Tuesday when the next midget show is staged and for two other race programs of the season. He plans, he said, to bring softball on a large scale to Wahsington next summer.

Leasing the track to the Texan, who once had a stable of 58 fighters, came about after a week-long conference between Alvis and the directors, Jimmy Fratione, Robert McCullough and George Dieffenbach. The first innovation will be a lowering of general admission prices, with about 4,000 seats being set aside at slashed rates.

Alvis' first promotion in Washington occurred last winter when he brought the first professional ice hockey to the District.

Midget races will continue under the sanction of the American Automobile Association, Alvis announced.

Lefty McIntire Hurls For 7-UP Tomorrow

"Lefty" McIntire, who pitched both ends of a split doubleheader in Maryland last week, will go to the mound for 7-Up A. C. tomorrow when it meets the Maryland Aces, Prince Georges County League co-champs, at Ballston Stadium at 3 o'clock.

Johnsen Faces Smith Today In Semifinal

One of the most interesting tennis matches that could be concocted locally will be presented this afternoon in the semifinal round of the D. C. Recreation Department tennis tournament when Davie Johnsen, hard-hitting youngster, meets the crafty veteran, Alphonso Smith.

In the second semifinal Hugh Lynch, who is seeded first just ahead of Johnsen, engages Ed (Bud) Mather. Tony Latona, Recreation Department official, who has handled the fifth annual tournament in fine style, announces that there are plenty of seats and parking space, both free, for spectators at Friends.

Johnsen, City of Washington champion and a semifinalist in the District championships, and Smith haven't met this season although they have both been entered in at least three previous tournaments.

Following the semifinal singles which are scheduled at 2:15 will be semifinal doubles matches between Lynch and Johnsen and George Herbert and Jack Smith, and Smith and Mather and Lieut. Jimmy Farrin and Tom Mangan.

Yankees Open Final Stand Here Today

Leonard to Pitch, Receive Award as Most Valuable Nat

The New York Yankees, who, with the pennant safely clinched, are making a bid to set a new record for games won in the American League in a single season, move into Griffith Stadium today.

They will meet the Nats this afternoon in the start of a two-game series, and the probability also is that they will meet Dutch Leonard, their chief tormentor this season. Leonard, the only pitcher in the league to hold four victories over the Yankees, scored those four wins in six starts against the New York Club.

Manager Bucky Harris will start the same rookie line-up that played against Cleveland, partly from a desire to see how his recruits perform and partly from necessity. Outfielder Johnny Welaj has been ill. Outfielder George Case is troubled with a sore arm, and Infielder Jimmy Bloodworth was only yesterday discharged from a hospital, where he was treated for a throat infection.

Immediately before Leonard starts after his twentieth victory of the season he will be presented with a trophy by Walter Johnson signifying that the knuckle-ball artist is the most valuable Nat player.

WJSV has been conducting a mail poll of the fans in the District and vicinity and Leonard was an easy victor. He drew some 4,000 more votes than his nearest competitor for the honor, Buddy Lewis. The rookie second baseman, Jimmy Bloodworth, was third in the poll and the veteran infielder Cecil Travis fourth.

The Yankees, with 102 games won this season, are aiming at the record of 110 games won by a Yankee team in 1927.

Eastern Meets Episcopal Today

Eastern High, with a team Coach Mike Kelley calls "one of the slowest I've ever seen," travels to Alexandria today for its first start of the grid season against Episcopal High at 2 p. m.

Kelley's chief lament is the failure of his one fast back, Francis Hallama, to report for practice yet. The latter has been recuperating at Walter Reed Hospital from a sprained back he suffered this summer.

Starting selections by Kelley will probably be "Buddy" Yokum, quarterback; Ray Soo, fullback; Jack Teague and Paul Cohill, halfbacks; Bob Wolwine and Bob Beyers, ends; Bob Peiri and Wiggy Kidwell, tackles; "Puddin" Lovett and Bob iKrk, guards, and Paul De Meglio, center.

Hoyas Lose Kercher For Opening Game

All-District End Dislocates Elbow and Will Be Out of Temple Game Friday Night; Mike Kopcik Will Replace Hime in Opener

The injury jinx that last year plagued other local college football squads, notably Maryland, to the comparative exclusion of Georgetown, caught up with the Hoyas yesterday and robbed them of a regular end for next Friday night's opener with Temple.

Bob Kercher, a unanimous All-District end in 1938, was discovered yesterday to be suffering from a dislocated elbow as a result of a scrimmage Thursday and is not expected to be in shape before the game with Syracuse, October 4. Before then, Georgetown will have met Roanoke in addition to Temple.

One of Georgetown's 60-minute players, Kercher, will be sorely missed, especially on passing plays in which he teamed so successfully with Jules Koshlap last year. He will be replaced by a sophomore, Mike Kopcik, who has shown marked ability as a punter besides an ability to perform the usual duties of an end.

Light work was the order at the Hilltop yesterday and Coach Jack Hagerty and his assistants concentrated their attention on improving timing and introducing several new plays to be used against Temple. Following Hagerty's warning Thursday that certain players were endangering their regular positions by an indifferent spirit, the squad was keyed up to a new high.

Maryland Looks Good Scrimmaging G. W.

The University of Maryland eleven, driving hard for the September 30 opener with Hampden-Sydney, showed its best form of the season yesterday in its second scrimmage in three days with George Washington.

With burly Pershing Mondorff celebrating his promotion to the first-string backfield by completing passes all over the field to several different receivers, the Terps showed great improvement offensively.

Whereas as the first Maryland team used against the Colonials in their scrimmage Wednesday could make only one first down in 30 consecutive minutes on the offense yesterday's regular eleven gained ground almost at will. Mondorff, never before regarded as anything more than a great dropkicker and a good blocker, is running and passing in a fashion that makes Coach Frank Dobson believe he may have the successor to Charlie Weidinger, triple-threat lost by graduation.

Mondorff gained consistently with his aerials to Beamer, an end, and to Shaffer and Ullman, backs. One of his throws to Beamer, a 6-foot-2 former Roosevelt High star, was good for a gain of 50-odd yards.

George Washington, nearly two weeks behind Maryland in length of practice time, also was improved over its performance Wednesday as Billy Richardson provided a backfield punch hitherto lacking. The stocky little senior pumped his fireplug legs through and around the Maryland line for many gains and greatly strengthened his bid for a regular position.

Mrs. Goodman Wins In Championship Play At Her Club; Davy Beats Mrs. McCarthy

Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, and Mrs. Henry Goodman, Woodmont, completed the winners in "Women's Club Championship" yesterday, that found six new champions crowned in the play at eight clubs.

Mrs. Davy medalist in the Congressional event and runner-up to Helen Dettweiler last year, duplicated her medal round of 81 in defeating Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, 5 and 3, in the title round. Mrs. Davy's card included fives on two par three holes.

Mrs. Goodman won the Woodmont title for the second straight year with a 19-hole victory over Mrs. Milton Harris, after trailing two down through the eleventh hole. Mrs. Goodman won the eighteenth hole with a four to square the match, and the nineteenth with another par to join Mrs. David Clark as the only repeating champion.

Ralph Bogart Wins D.C. Amateur Title

Shea won the first hole against Bogart but two pushed iron shots cost him the fourth and fifth, and he went one down. He evened it again on the sixth when Bogart had trap-trouble, and after going three down he made a comeback attempt on the twelfth with a birdie, but he drove in the woods on the thirteenth an eight-foot birdie putt on the next missed an 8-foot birdie putt on the next and one shorter for a par on the fifteenth to allow Bogart to get too far in front.

It was Bogart's first important title in his few golfing years, although he holds the Schoolboy title and the Army and Navy championship at present. Shea has been without a crown since his D. C. and mid-Atlantic victories two years ago, and his defeat cost Georgetown University the trophy, as his classmate, Johnny Burke, won last year.

Cramer's Bat, Weak Fielding Beat Mackmen

Bosox Register a 7-5 Victory; Wagner Is Credited With Win

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 22.—The combination of Doc Cramer's lusty hitting and the opposition's sloppy fielding gave the Red Sox a 7-5 triumph over the Athletics in today's series opener.

Broadway Charlie Wagner received credit for the win, although he was relieved by Emerson Dickman in the seventh after he gave the Athletics five hits and all of their runs. The Sockers slugged three Philadelphia pitchers for 12 hits and, for all practical purposes, clinched the game with a four-run rally in the fourth against starter Buster McCrabb.

'Unprecedented' Calm Mars President's Cup Regatta

59-year-old veteran is not the oldest regatta driver this year. Not by 20 years. The dean of them all is Robert Jaite, 79-year-old businessman from Jaite, Ohio, who has entered his Apache II in the event for 225 cubic inch hydroplanes, a race that calls for the steadiest hand and nerve.

The youngest entrant is G. Bache Gill, jr., 13, of Washington, who drove in the midget class yesterday.

Because of the unusually calm water the outboard pilots resembled jockeys in the homestretch as they rocked their spitting iron jitterbugs to get the bounce that means added speed.

The only spill of the day's races occurred in the second heat of the Class B professional event. Donald Garner, of Toledo, capsized on the turn at the downstream buoy. He was speedily rescued by Coast Guard and said he was not at all injured. The motor of his unnamed boat, however, was flooded.

The bow of Calypso, headquarters of the officials was a fascinating and somewhat bewildering sight to the landlubber with its array of varied color flags, rows of clocks and small watches and other odd looking mechanism. One of the most difficult jobs is that of Dr. Ralph E. Gould, head timer from the time section of the Bureau of Standards, who operated a watch for every contestant.

The press was unanimous in agreeing that this is the best handled regatta yet. A noted improvement was the speed with which official results was distributed. An elaborate buffet luncheon was served aboard the Calypso.

Th most skillful driving of the day wa sturned in by Earl Hildebrand, of Richmond, in the second heat of the Class A professional when he finished second to Clint Ferguson despite losing his spring throttle soon after the start of the race. Without the spring throttle, which corresponds to the accelerator on an automobile, Hildebrand had to reach back all the way to the motor to feed his gas while he attempted to steer with his free hand.

A more serious accident befell Walter E. Off, Lynnewood, Pa., in the same race. On the downstream backstretch his gas line broke, setting fire to the motor. He extinguished the blaze without assistance from Coast Guards, who rushed to his side.

Among the distinguished visitors to the Calypso was Otto F. Barthel, general chairman of the Detroit Gold Cup committee and commodore of the Detroit Yacht Club, 1906-1921.

Two of the largest of the 100 odd pleasure craft which dotted the outskirts of the V-shaped course were the 140-foot Navigation, owned by the Bureau of Navigation, and the Falcon, belonging to the U. S. Engineers, which appeared even longer.

A "dangerous mystery" entry in tomorrow's American speed boat championships will Be Gen VI, owned and drvien by David Geril, of New York City. The Gen VI will be powered by a motor lifted from the Betty V, with which its owner, Mal Crooks, established a world record of 86 miles for a single motored craft in 1936. It was said that Crooks could have bettered that mark had he not feared to place any added strain on the hull, which is not nearly as strong as the hull of the Gen. VI. Besides the Gen VI, Gerli has two other boats entered.

Feller's Hit Brings Him 22d Victory

Double in Ninth Leads to Triumph Over Detroit, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Roy Weatherly's ninth-inning single with two out scored Bob Feller and gave Cleveland a 5-4 victory over Detroit in the series opener today.

Feler, who had doubled for his second hit of the day and moved to third on Lou Boudreau's infield out, thus turned in his twenty-second triumph of the campaign despite the slugging of Roy Cullenbine, Tigers' left fielder.

Cullenbine, with two mates on base by the free ticket route, swatted one of Feller's pitches for a homer and three runs in the fourth and accounted for the other Detroit run with a circuit blow when he led off in the seventh. Archie McKain started for Detroit but Schoolboy Rowe, the Tigers' third hurler, was the loser.

Whitey Moore, in quest of victory No. 14, was knocked from the box in the fifth when three errors, three walks and three hits gave the Bucs seven runs to push them within one of tying the score at 9-all.

First Game

Milt Shoffner, who succeeded him, was hit almost as freely but did not walk a man and the only run scored off him after the disasterous fifth resulted from Bill Werber's muff of Brubaker's easy grounder, scored off him after the disasterous to cross the plate. Shoffner got credit for the win, while the loss was charged against Bob Klinger, first of four Buc hurlers to see service.

ing Two Bits, jumped into an early lead of 30 yards at the upstream buoy and Ferguson could not overtake him until they had rounded the turn on the second lap.

This event was confusing to spectators for Gartbergh was afterwards disqualified because his boat was under weight and Adolff Schilling, of Chester, Pa., given both third places.

The slow time of 37.767 m. p. h. was caused because of the smoothness of the water. In boat racing water without small waves is just as bad as water that is too rough, because the adhesion against the hull kills the speed of the boat.

Ferguson came back in the class B amateur event with a double victory to boost his point to 400 before the lunch period.

D. C. Man Scores

I. E. Hale, of Washington, distinguished himself in this event by finishing third in the first heat and second in the next to place second in the event.

It was in the class C event that Ferguson had his trouble. He came up to the starting gun in fine shape, but his motor stalled and before he could get it running again he had fallen away behind and finished fourth. In the second heat, however, he jumped back into the running with a first, and got credit for second place in the final standings.

C. H. Collins, of Richmond, won the first heat of this event and was setting a hot pace in the second when his boat capsized at the downstream turn. This eliminated him from the winners' circle and Roy J. Straley, of Eggertsville, N. Y., was given first place. He finished second in both heats and his 600 points overshadowed Ferguson by 31 points.

Gold Cup Boats Vie In President's Race

GOLD CUP, from Page 17.

Tops III out there I could have given you a good line on how fast we were going. But when I ride in a strange boat it throws you all off, and I wouldn't venture to make a guess which boat is the fastest.

Plenty of Competition

In the 225 race, Cooper, himself a 59-year-old veteran, will be flanked on one side by a competitor who is 20 years his senior and on the other by several younger drivers who have been pushing him in every regata this year.

Robert Jaite, 79, a vice president of an Ohio business has sent in his entry.

On the other hand will be such drivers as Gibson Bradfield, in his Bad News; F. E. Vintschger, in Tortuga; T. R. Chatfield, in Viper III; R. E. Wolf, in M'fah, and George Schrafft, in Chrisaie III.

The 135-cubic inch displacement class also will draw the interest of Washington fans. Jack Hyde and Andy Crawford, both local drivers, will be competing for top spots in this event. Hyde, who will drive his Gypsy Lass, lowered the existing world record at Red Bank, and Crawford sliced a chunk off that mark when he drove his Edandy 54 miles per hour at Detroit.

Two other local entries in this event will be Ralph N. Smith, of Arlington, who will pilot Fire Ball and J. E. Fuller, of this city, who will drive Miss Pudd.

Edison Hedges has entered his Eagle, which is powered with a Lycoming motor, and may surprise all of our local entries.

War Spurs U. S. Business With Latin America

Steel and Coal Chiefly Wanted by South American Countries

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 22.—The European war already has caused an increase in South America's trade with the United States, according to a Wall Street Journal survey which found that bankers now are arranging credits for a number of United States exports of products formerly sold in quantity to South American countries by the nations of Europe.

"A week ago," said the survey, "this demand was almost entirely in the 'inquiry' stage. It now has developed to a point where orders are being placed."

The bankers said the heaviest stream of inquiries and orders were coming from Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela and Peru and that coal and steel were the products mainly desired.

Also, bankers disclosed, they were receiving an increasing number of calls for credit facilities to permit the importation of additional products from South America. If the United States buys greater quantities of goods from the Latin-American nations, it was pointed out, those countries will be able to buy an increasing volume of United States goods.

German Rivalry

In the last few years, inter-American trade has suffered from the fact that the Latin-American nations had insufficient "dollar exchange" to pay for United States goods. The United States Government has attempted to facilitate trade by arranging credits through the Export-Import Bank of Washington, but has been confronted with the difficulty that Germany, in particular, was entering the South American market actively on a barter basis.

One banking interest was reported working on a sufficient volume of Latin-American business orders to require charter of ships, since the war has disrupted much of the normal shipping.

Refrigerator Eggs At September Low

Chicago, Sept. 22. (AP).—Refrigerator eggs recorded an all-time September low here today when October contracts fell to 16.55 cents a dozen under general liquidation and stop-loss selling.

Closing quotations were just above the low point and at net losses of about ½ cent with October contracts at 16.60 cents and November at 16.70 cents. The selling was attributed by traders to discouragement over slack demand for reserve supplies.

Cotton Cloth Demand Wipes Out Supplies

War Buying Movement Absorbs 700,000,000 Yards of Textiles

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 22.—A record demand for cotton textiles since the start of the war has solved the recently serious inventory problem of the spinning trade, Worth Street cotton brokers said today.

Before the European clash the chief concern of cotton manufacturers was the large oversupply of unfinished and finished goods at the mills. As a remedy curtailment programs were widely adopted during the summer months.

Curtailment will end shortly, it was reported today, and in many manufacturing centers three-shift operations are contemplated.

The war buying movement swept into consumptive channels more than 700,000,000 yards of cotton cloth constructions, it was esimated in textile circles. Moreover, it was said that in addition to expected production up to the end of the year that approximately 65 to 70 per cent of mills stocks were sold. The great demand pushed prices as much as 1 cent a yard over August levels.

Heavy Call for Wool

Sharing the spotlight with cotton and at times overshadowing the fiber was a soaring advance in wool prices accompanied by a huge demand.

Today, for example, wool top futures dealings in the New York market set a near-record at more than 2,500,000 pounds. Prices at the close showed net gains ranging from 2.2 cents to 4.0 cents a pound. Spot tops were marked up 4 cents at $1.30 a pound.

To provide for the widely increased trading interest in the market the New York Wool Top Exchange announced trading hours after October 2 would be lengthened 30 minutes daily.

Heavy Selling at Close Shades Prices Leading Stocks Set Early New Highs Treasury Supports Government Bonds

New York, Sept. 22.—The stock market, which had worked irregularly higher during the major part of today's session, was called upon to accept some heavy selling in the closing minutes which left the average down the insignificant amount of 0.17 point. Pressure developed in the industrials, where various war babies invited profit-taking operations. Utilities held firm, and the rails, which did not get as early a start in the war market as the more volatile industrials, closed moderately higher. Trading dwindled during the afternoon, but was active in the closing few minutes, the total turnover for the day being 1,860,500 shares.

Before the sell-off, equipment and aviation shares were prominent on the upside. New highs were made by Pressed Steel Car, Baldwin and Poor & Co. Lima Locomotive was well supported at rising prices. The popularity of the equipments has been the feature of the week, aided by actual orders placed by leading railroads and spurred along by additional inquiries. More life has been shown by these issues than at any time in recent years.

Official support of United States Treasury bonds was resumed in the listed market today, soon after the securities resumed their downward course at the start of business. The Federal Reserve buying stemmed the decline, and most experts were of the opinion that no great amount actually was taken for official account, as the news that official bids were in halted the flow of offerings. The market otherwise was irregular Turnover in all bonds was $16,663,000, with Treasury obligations accounting for $5,179,000

Neutrality

Politics did not play an important role in today's markets. The street followed discussions centering around the neutrality legislation and the assumption is that no quick action will be taken by Congress on the President's request to have the embargo provisions removed. Sentiment in the financial district is generally with the President, but even among those who hope he will be successful there is a growing feeling that investors should not place too much importance on the final outcome. Thus far the quickened pace of American industry has been due almost solely to the rush of domestic orders. Even without the embargo removed, our companies can still sell all types of raw materials and all but a few specified manufactured products to the belligerents.

This school of market students feels that we were due for a bull market, with or without the war, and that all the declaration of hostilities did for the stock market was to touch off the domestic business a little sooner than expected.

Certainly the immediate trend of domestic business is favorable, and week-end reports today confirmed what was already realized. Automobile production continued to move forward. There were few wide swings among leading stocks today and the sentiment in the street was that fluctuations may be more restricted than formerly while debate on the neutrality act proceeds in Congress. High prices but relatively inactive Norfolk & Western was an exception, closing up 4½ points. Telephone lost a point, Bethlehem and Eastman Kodak dropped 1¾ each, Harvester was off a point and Westinghouse 1¼. International Nickel was firm in the metal division. Douglas Aircraft lost nearly a point and United States Steel a half. Chrysler and General Motors sank major fractions.

Copper Futures Off

Metals eased with the balance of the industrials, but there has been only a slight let-up in the demand for copper, with reports circulating that some sales have been consummated at 12½ cents a pound. Major producers are still quoting 12 cents and are trying to ration sales. Copper futures closed off 2 to 7 points. Wheat eased slightly after alternating periods of strength and softness. The close was irregular, ⅜ cent lower to ⅜ cent higher. Similar irregularity was noted in cotton, with the close higher by 1 to 6 points based on trade buying.

The tone of the Treasury issues market was soft at the beginning, owing to the spreading realization among holders that there were no supporting bids. Buyers held aloof, and the recessions soon ran almost to a full point in longest bonds. Just before noon, the Federal Reserve resumed its acquistions, and the market promptly stabilized. Net changes at the end were modest, some short bonds showing small losses while long-dated obligations gained 2-32 to 8-32 point.

Treaury 2¾s of 1963-58 touched a low of 99 before the official buying was resumed, but closed at 99 22-32. Despite the support, six issues remained under par value at the end. Treasury-guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were idle and mostly lower, as the interest of the Federal Reserve was not keen in such securities. It was accepted, however, that these bonds would be supported if any break occurred.

Telephone Bonds Yield

Telephone bonds fell to lower levels, both issues of the parent company's 3¼s touching lows for the year. Best grade power and light issues were soft in spots Leading rail issues dropped, but some of the industrials held their ground.

Speculative railroad bonds attracted some buying in the corporate section, the gains ranging from fractions to 2 points. Alleghany Corporation bonds held to the better levels reached on the reallocation of collateral. Some of the power and light issues did well. Local traction bonds did not vary much, despite the request for tenders to exhaust $10,000,000 of New York City funds.

Belgian bonds were strong in the foreign department, owing to the assurance of neutrality by Germany. Danish issues reflected a little demand, but Norwegians were soft. The Australian and Canadian groups did well, but German and Polish bonds merely continued their adjustments to war. Panama 5s were marked up 5 points, while other Latin-American default issues were uncertain.

Foreign bond experts noted the continued firmness of Italian and Japanese securities, which some attributed to the sharp previous decline of such securities, while others suspect sinking fund purchases are being made.

Canada Replaces Britain as Biggest Shipper of Gold

Canada replaced Great Britain last week as the principal shipper of gold to the United States, but much of the Canadian shipments were believed to have been British gold which had been stored in Canada. In the week ended September 15 Canadian shipments accounted for $79,857,409 of the $116,006,982 total received in this country.

It was believed that the Canadian transfers might have been due largely to British purchases of dollars through Canada to meet contracts under which, before the war, they sold American dollars for future delivery. Another possibility was that England and Canada were buying dollars with gold to stock up on American currency with which to pay for American goods in the future.

Silver imports in the week amounted to $1,027,362 and included $475,538 from Mexico and $166,576 from Canada. No gold was exported. Silver exported totaled $293,742.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 22 (AP). (United States Department of Agriculture)—The activity in wool on the Boston market today slackened, but asking prices were somewhat upward and actual sale prices were very firm. Good French combing length fine territory wools, in original bags, were realizing mostly around $1, scoured basis. Average 12-months Texas wools were bringing $1 to $1.04, scoured basis. Average to short French combing length fine territory wools, in original bags, were moving at 92 to 95 cents, scoured basis.

Industrial Diamonds Up 35 Per Cent in Day

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—The price of industrial diamonds—the dull but expensive stones used for fine cutting—went up as much as 35 per cent today because of the war. The reason is that the young cutters of Amsterdam, and Brussels, the world's diamond centers, have been called to the colors to defend their borders and Great Britain has banned exports of diamonds from the South African fields to prevent their falling into the hands of German industries. Diamonds are important in the manufacture of gun mechanisms.

Cotton Futures Edge Upward In Narrow Range

New York, Sept. 22. (AP).—Action in cotton futures was largely dominated by the trend of securities today. The market operated in a narrow range throughout, finishing with net gains of 1 to 6 points.

More active price fixing for domestic mill accounts which resulted from increased activity in Worth street accounted for the steadier tone. Hedge selling was restricted by the current holding movement in the South.

Opening slightly lower, due mainly to Bombay and Liverpool straddle selling, the market quickly recovered in early trading. Leading spot interests furnished the best support.

The advance was checked, however, as the best levels attracted increased southern selling and realizing. Some of the pressure was said to be on reports of continued favorable weather influencing the new crop.

Business Now Seen Resting on Solid Ground

But Trade Remains Under Levels of 1937, A. B. A. Survey Shows

By Thomas M. Cahill.

In spite of war and its attendant uncertainties, a generally hopeful outlook for business is indicated by the September survey of Banking, official organ of the American Bankers' Association. Business is beginning to see the light and feel solid ground, although still wary, the survey states. Improvement has been fairly general, but statistically, trade still falls short of levels reached two years ago. However, there is a noticeabe spirit of hopefulness on all sides and several factors are responsible for it in a major way.

Of these, the survey says, one is the obvious change for the better that has come over public opinion regarding business. This is reflected in polls of all kinds, conversation, editorial pages, and in the actions of political bodies from Washington to the smallest local administration. Another factor is the unexpected nature of the improvement and consistent activity of the summer months, the survey continues. Instead of a lull during "dog days" there was a rise in operation, in profits and volume of orders for fall delivery.

Inventories Low

Third on the list of encouraging items is the low point of most inventories. A spirit of caution, induced by politics abroad and at home, took hold of industry early in the year and production schedules were held below sales. Finally, the survey analyzes business reaction to war conditions and explains that the situation is now accepted as a normal business factor rather than a series of temporary shocks to the economic system that have characterized the repeated threats of war for more than a year.

Banking's cross section index of business obtained from a poll of more than 3,000 bank directors and bank presidents in all sections of the country, continues to show improvement in comparison with the previous month. In August, 44 per cent of those canvassed for the purpose of this summary said that business is improving, 42 per cent found condition about the same, and 14 per cent reported a decline. This shows improvement over July, when 39 per cent said the direction was up, 41 per cent reported their respective enterprises were holding their own, and 20 per cent reported an unfavorable trend.

Britain Buys 600,000 Tons More Sugar

New York, Sept. 22 (AP)—Lowry & Co., sugar brokers, reported today the firm had been advised in cables from London the British government has contracted for additional purchase of 600,000 tons of sugar, making a total of 1,200,000 in wartime buying of food supplies.

The additional lot was described as all the sugar available from British colonial sources, such as the West Indies, Australia, South Africa and British Guiana, to the end of next August. They are protected in the British market by preferential tariffs.

The price was said to be equivalent to about 1.36 cents a pound, including cost, insurance and freight.

The Commission House also reported Baltic countries, cut off from previous sources of supply in Central Europe and Poland, had diverted purchases of refined sugar to the United States. Exports of refined, it was said, probably will show considerable gains in wartime shifts of trade.

Gold Star Rites Set Tomorrow

The annual services of the American Gold Star Mothers of the World War, Inc., will be conducted at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Tomb of Unknown Soldier with Mrs. Mathilda Burling, national president, presiding.

The United States Army Band will play. Brief speeches will be made by officials of the American Legion, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the National Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States. A Presidential proclamation has designated the day as Gold Star Mothers' Day.

Dredge Worker Saved After Fall

A workman was saved from death at the Gravelly Point Airport project yesterday by the quick action of a fellow employe, after he fell overboard from the dredge Gulfstream.

J. L. Faircloth, 31, of Tampa, Fla., was pulled from the muddy waters by Alton Romero, 26, who jumped off the dredge and searched the river. Officials aboard the dredge said that Faircloth probably would have been sucked into the pipes had he not been pulled out. At Alexandria Hospital his condition was said to be good.

What do you bid?

Answers

1. Pass. If all partner can do is raise your opening club bid to two clubs, there is practically no hope of game in this hand.

2. One Spade. Despite the fact that this hand contains only two-plus honor-tricks, the distribution, plus the fact that the strength is in the majors, make an opening bid almost compulsory.

You do not need much from your partner to make a game in spades or hearts. In addition, opening the bidding with one spade has preemptive value in case the opponents have the better hands.

3. Pass. Although this is a very sound hand and one which at first suggests slam possibilities, you have told your full story. On this bidding, partner should have the clubs stopped, and if he is bidding correctly, you should be in a reasonably comfortable three-no-trump contract.

4. Two spades. This hand is identical to the hand in problem 1, but here you rebid because of the opposing overcall. Your hand is more than a minimum and you want to fight for the part-score. Although game seems out of the question, you shouldn't be in trouble at the level of three. You bid two spades even with the weak spade suit as it is cheaper than three clubs.

He may easily have four spades in his hand, and if such is the case, two or three spades (if the opponents push you further) will be the spot for the hand. Partner should realize that on this competitive bidding your two-spade bid does not show a particularly strong hand and is not necessarily a game try.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

MRS. ELINOR F. MORGENTHAU, wife of the Treasury Secretary, has been appointed by the President as a member of the National Advisory Committee of the National Youth Administration, Aubrey Williams, NYA Administrator, announces. The advisory committee is composed of outstanding representatives of youth, education, labor, industry and agriculture. The committee's duty is to assist the NYA in arranging programs to meet the needs of youth. Except for expenses while on official business, the members serve without compensation. Mrs. Morgenthau has long taken an active part in civic affairs and philanthropic enterprises and is thoroughly familiar with youth problems.

THREE Government officials have been elected to membership on the Community Chest board of trustees. They are: Benjamin W. Thoron, director of finance, Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, who also becomes a member of the Chest executive committee; C. G. Garman, assistant deputy production credit commissioner in the Farm Credit Administration and president of the Group Health Association, and Nathan R. Margold, solicitor in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans Administrator, who heads the Government unit organization in the forthcoming Chest campaign, says that practically all top leadership positions have been filled. Fifty-eight out of 63 necessary department chairmen have already accepted appointment, he announces. Assisting General Hines in organizing the Government unit in the drive are Frank A. Birgfeld, Treasury Department chief clerk; Bri. Gen. Albert L. Cox, vice chairman in charge of Government speakers; J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, as a vice chairman; J. Austin Latimer, special assistant to the Postmaster General, vice chairman, and John E. Upp, classifications committee of the Veterans Administration.

ARCHIE C. EDWARDS, of the Civil Service Commission, was chosen as the "outstanding Employe of the Month," at the Federal Employee Playhouse the other night. The honor was in recognition of his work in organizing the Agriculture Recreation Association . . . The Georgia State Society will compliment newly arrived Georgians here with a dance at the Shoreham Hotel Saturday evening, October 7. Harry L. Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and president of the society, will be assisted in receiving guests by the other officers: Edmond H. Worthy, Dr. Frank Hand, Thomas Camp and Mrs. Julia O. Almand, vice presidents; Mrs. J. W. Thurston, financial secretary; Lacy W. Hinely, secretary, and Miss Leone Barber, treasurer.

COL. CHARLES I. STENGLE, former president of the American Federation of Government Employees, is about to undertake his new duties as administrative assistant to the organization president. Col. Stengle, once a Congressman, has a lengthy background in legislative experience and is in a spot to do the A. F. G. E. national office and its members considerable service.

RISING COSTS in household necessities and the probability of further rises is a question coming more and more to the front in Federal employe talk, formally and informally. The cry is that as the cost of living rises, Federal salaries in the main are remaining stationary. The universal answer of the department and agency chiefs is that raises can't come until additional appropriations come. And when speaking of additional appropriations that might spell salary increases, the thought occurs that economy—so far as Government personnel is concerned—is the watchword now.

Fiddler's Contest To Be a Feature Of Va. Dog Mart

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Sept. 22.—A tentative program had been worked out today by the chamber of commerce for the dog mart which is to be held here on Friday, October 13.

The mart will be held at the James Monroe Athletic Field for the first time. In previous years it has been held in City Park.

A new feature will be an old time fiddler's contest. The fox horn blowing contest is to be retained. The program will also list a trick dog show and a street parade at noon.

The mart, according to tradition, originated 241 years ago when settlers met with Indians to exchange dogs for furs and other articles desired by the white men. The custom continued each year until the Revolution, when it was abandoned. It was revived by the chamber of commerce here in 1927 at the suggestion of Judge Alvin T. Embrey.

Budget Hearings Set

Richmond, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—The governor's advisory committee on the budget will open a full week of hearings Monday at the State Capitol for State departments, agencies and institutions.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

Chapter 42

THE BLOOD of the sumac, dying upon the slopes of Powder House Farm had turned to wine and rust.

Adriana and I sat on the hilltop bench, under its giant granite boulders and looked out over the gently ruffled blue of the Sound.

Autumn was in the air, and the thickets beneath us were bursting full of all sorts of birds touching at the Island on their southward flight from winter. I had been using them as a text in a discussion not altogether new.

"You should do it," I said, pointing to the Adriana, swinging tiny below us in the cove, "you know I'm perfectly incapable of taking that boat into Long Island Sound, much less the West Indies, or Tahiti. You should come with me. It would be fun."

"I suppose you feel you have to go to Tahiti; or somewhere," she said, watching me with delightful seriousness.

"It's going to get horribly cold here." I suggested, "soon."

"What are you going to do for a living?"

"Fortunately, I don't have to do anything, for a living. Especially if it turns out that the government really does want to buy the Sea Reduction Corporation plant from us."

"Oh, but you can't just loaf. You're really clever; almost as clever as you think you are. You ought to be of some use to the world."

"I could write, if you call that being of use. You admit I'm intelligent as hell."

"WHAT? NOVELS?"

"Well, anyway a novel—when I thing of something to write one about."

"Why not write the story of the Adriana and the Sea Reduction Corporation, and yourself?"

"And you," I said. "I will if you will go south with me in the yawl and help me run her. When we are under way, you will steer and I will go below and write, and when we come into one of those wonderful tropical ports, with the palm trees and laughing natives and bright white beaches—"

"What about mother?" asked the girl.

"Oh, she'll be all right," I said confidently. "All daughters have to marry and go away sooner or later. I'll bet she knows what is going to happen better than you do."

"Of course," said Adriana, with an air of being reassured, "she has Craigie."

The MacGlashan's silver brother pricked his ears at the sound of his name, but the girl's own dog got up from where the two were stretched on the brown grass and came over to his mistress and smiled in her face.

"And of course," said Adriana, "The MacGlashan does like your boat very well."

"Come on, my dear," I said. "It's getting late. Let's be off together to the South Seas."

The girl sat for awhile, watching with those blue eyes the islands bounding Vineyard Sound. I advanced a few simple arguments requiring no words.

Finally she said she thought it could be arranged.

So that's the way it is.

Gallup Polls on the Neutrality Act

Here are the questions asked by Gallup Poll interviewers:

- Should the Neutrality Law be changed so that England and France could buy war supplies from the United States?
- If the Neutrality Law is changed, should England and France be required to pay cash for the goods?
- Should England and France be required to carry the goods away in their own ships?

Dies Testifies To Grand Jury About Gardner

Writer Accused of Trying to Sabotage Quiz Of Silver Shirts

Fraser S. Gardner, magazine writer and "political researcher," yesterday spent more than two hours before the District grand jury, which had heard testimony from Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who has accused Gardner of trying to sabotage the work of the House committee investigating un-American activity.

The Dies committee several weeks ago voted to seek Gardner's indictment for perjury. After studying the file, District Attorney Pine presented the evidence to the grand jury yesterday.

Gardner testified before the House committee on August 23 that he had no connection with any group under investigation. Later he said he had worked six months for Sky Land Press, a publication of the Silver Shirt organization led by William Dudley Pelley, which was under scrutiny by the House committee. Before he testified, Gardner had applied for a job as investigator.

Dies took the position that Gardner wilfully concealed his connection with the Silver Shirts and charged that he wanted the investigating job so he could hamper Dies' work. Besides Dies, the grand jury yesterday heard Attorney George E. Sullivan, who testified before the committee that Gardner offered to sell him confidential information.

The grand jury did not call Robert E. Stripling, Dies committee secretary, or Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, who were waiting in a District court anteroom.

Gardner had asked to be allowed to tell his side of the case and the grand jury voted to hear him. Before entering the grand jury room he said he was hopeful of being able to explain the entire situation.

WPA Promises Review of Teaching Project For D. C. Children Unable to Attend School

300 Mothers Form Organization to Press For Aid for Shut-ins

Hope rose yesterday among more than 300 Washington mothers that WPA visiting teachers again will be sent into homes and hospitals this year to instruct physically handicapped children unable to attend school.

The day's most heartening development was when Dr. L. R. Alderman, educational director for the Federal WPA, said application for renewal of the project will be reviewed "without prejudice" and promptly.

Meantime Dr. Robert L. Haycock, acting superintendent of schools, and Mrs. Mary Steele, director of professional and service projects for the District WPA, were rushing to completion the necessary papers.

"Unique Situation" Admitted

"We hope to submit them to Federal headquarters tomorrow or Monday," said Mrs. Steele, who again expressed hope the application will be acted upon favorably.

Pointing out that education of physically handicapped children, as well as sound ones, is a function of local boards of education, Dr. Alderman nevertheless acknowledged that a unique situation prevails in Washington, one which might influence outcome of the campaign for resumption of the WPA teaching program.

The "unique situation" in the Nation's Capital is that citizens and taxpayers have no say in the appropriation of funds. Although sentiment was in favor of a $22,400 allotment to hire 16 visiting teachers for 1939-40, as requested by the Board of Education, the funds were denied by Congress.

Mothers Organize

Organization of the Association for Education of Handicapped Children, comprising mothers who are determined to fight for renewal of the PWA program, was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Odesso O'Hara, 615 E street northeast, is president of the group. Mrs. Manly Peele, 1700 Thirty-sixth street northwest, was elected secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Florence Welch, 35 Adams street northwest, publicity chairman.

All are parents of shut-in children who are physically unable to attend even the special classes for crippled which are conducted at Langdon School.

As was the case last year, both white and colored children will receive instruction if the pending WPA project is approved. In 1938-39 visiting teachers were sent to 185 white and 163 colored boys and girls.

Mrs. Welch was named publicity chairman of the Association for Education of Handicapped Children, formed by mothers who are determined to fight for renewal of the educational project.

White House Park Closed to All but Those on Business

By the Associated Press

The White House grounds were closed yesterday to all except persons having business at the Executive Mansion.

War-whetted public curiosity about the comings and goings of officials and desire to afford added protection for the President were understood to be factors in the Secret Service decision to keep out casual visitors and tourists, who heretofore have been permitted to stroll at will through the grounds

Firemen Seek Toys for Needy

The Chevy Chase Volunteer Fire Department yesterday appealed for donations of toys to aid its eleventh campaign for bringing Christmas cheer to needy families of Montgomery County.

Toys will be called for by firemen or can be left at department headquarters, 7001 Connecticut avenue, Fire Chief Edward Sacket explained. He said the department is ready to begin reconditioning the gifts immediately.

Christian Science Text

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The golden text is from Isaiah 64:4. "Since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside Thee, what He hath prepared for him that waiteth for Him."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "God be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause His face to shine upon us; That Thy way may be known upon earth, Thy saving health among all nations." (Psalms 67:1,2) "Science and Health With the Key to the Scriptures", by Mary Baker Eddy: "As the mythology of pagan Rome has yielded to a more spiritual idea of Diety, so will our material theories yield to spiritual ideas, until the finite gives place to the infinite, sickness to health, sin to holiness, and God's kingdom comes 'in earth, as it is in heaven.'" (Page 339)
